Test Shows U. N. Unsure Of Guilt Vote On Balkans

Way Is Left Open For Russia, Poland To Take Part in 'Watchdog' Duties

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.,
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 10.—A test vote on the Greek issue today indicated that the United Nations could not get a dependable two-thirds majority for an Assembly vote of "guilty" against Greece's three northern neighbors.

It was not a clear-cut test but it showed widespread reluctance, particularly among the smaller nations, to an outright condemnation of any country. Accordingly the American delegation was ready tonight to consider some softening of its original resolution, which would have found Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania guilty of helping the Greek guerillass.

The exact form of the modified wording has not yet been decided. It may take the form of a British proposal, which simply "takes account" of the fact that a majority of the Security Council's investigators found that the three countries "had given assistance and support" to the guerillas. The British proposal then calls upon Greece's three neighbors "to do nothing which could furnish aid and assistance to the said guerillas."

Little Nations Abstain

All this week many of the Latin-Americans, the Scandinavians and other smaller countries have shown that they did not like the stiff American resolution as it stood. This afternoon they translated their reluctance into votes.

The last come on a Colombian proposal to delete the guilt clauses from the American resolution and substitute others. The Colombian proposal was defeated by 29 votes to 6, with 16 abstentions, implying that 29 countries wanted to keep the American clauses intact.

Technically this would be ample for a two-thirds vote, since abstentions do not count under the Assembly's rules. But the Americans did not like the large number of abstentions today, since these countries ca nalways switch to the "no" side on later votes. The abstentions include the entire Arab bloc, the three Scandinavians, Ethiopia, Chile, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Mexico and Venezuela.

Door Open to Russia

Earlier the Assembly's Political Committee had gone ahead with its plan to send a semi-permanent special commission to Greece in spite of Russia's announcement yesterday that it would boycott the commission's work.

By a vote of 32 to 1, with 24 abstentions it decided to set up an 11-nation group consisting of Australia, Brazil, China, France, Mexico, The Netherlands, Pakistan, The United Kingdom and the United States, with seats to be held open for Russia and Poland.

Canada's minister of justice, James R. Ilsley, proposed keeping places open for the boycotting countries, in the hope that they might reconsider in time. This

Dr. A. B. Brow, the inventor's personal physician, said examination disclosed no serious condition.

Hospital attendants said an oxygen tent was at hand for possible emergency, but Wright's condition did not warrant its use. An electrocardiograph was made later. Results were not availible immediately.

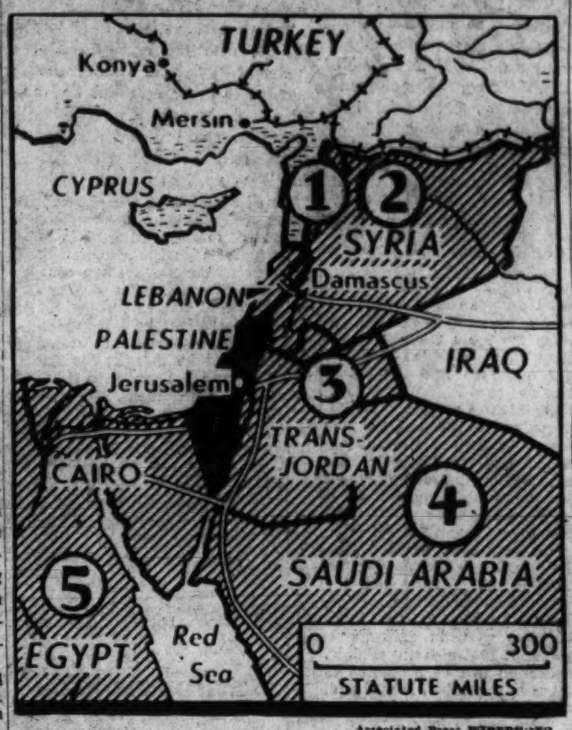
Arab Forces Reported on Move; U. S. to Give Partition Stand



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ARAB NATIONS MANEUVER—Five Arab states (shaded and numbered areas) reportedly are moving troops toward the borders of Palestine (black area) in a military maneuver against Zionism

All U. N. Awaits Position on Aid In Enforcement

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Long Island, Oct. 10 (NYHT).—The slow-moving United Nations debate on Palestine will enter a new phase tomorrow when the United States will become the first of the big powers to declare itself for or against the controversial partition of the Holy Land.

While it is generally believed that the Americans will support partition to some extent, subject to modifications of the plan now before the U. N., all delegations are waiting tensely to hear whether the United States is willing to help enforce partition.

Partition can be discussed endlessly and even recommended by the U. N. but it will amount to nothing but words unless some country or countries are willing to go in and enforce it. And now that the British are likely to quit Palestine at any time, the attitude of the Americans will be especially important.

It has been a struggle for the United States to decide on a Palestine policy. Much more is involved than the merits of the case between the Jews and Arabs in Palestine alone. A good deal of American self-interest is involved.

Among the American ponderings: Are the Arab states bluffing when they say partition means war? Or that it means a complete break with the west, including perhaps a break of the oil pipelines? Would American support of partition drive the six Arab states toward Russia, not only in the world scene but in the voting columns at Lake Success? And so on.

Today's sole speech before the Palestine committee of the U. N. General Assembly was made by Dr. Jorge Garcia Granados, of Guatemala, a partition advocate who was one of the eleven members of the U. N. committee that passed the summer investigating the Palestine problem.

Pro-Nazi Record Hit

Along with his speech, which hammered hard at the pro-Nazi record of the Haj Amil el Husseini, exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and head of the Arab higher committee of Palestine, Dr. Garcia Granados recognized the supreme importance of the Palestine enforcement problem by proposing an amendment to the partition report of the 11-country investigating committee.

Under his plan, the U. N. would administer Palestine during the

7-Nation League Plans Precautions Against Zionism

Beirut, Lebanon, Oct. 10 (AP).—Arab sources said tonight the armed forces of the Arab world, which is unofficially estimated to be able to muster 200,000 to 250,000 regulars, were concentrating on the Palestine frontiers to cordon off "terrorist organizations and Zionist forces."

Other official quarters here and in Palestine declared, however, they had been unable to detect any unusual troop movements.

While troop maneuvers were reported in progress to implement a decision of the Arab League of seven nations, the league council went back into session tonight to plan the next "military precautionary actions against Zionism."

Riad Bey es Solh, Premier of Lebanon, told reporters, "Our troops have moved to the frontier," and Ahmad Sharabati, defense minister of Syria, said in Damascus that Syrian troops already were quartered on Palestine's northeastern border as a precaution against possible "terrorist movements and Zionist espionage." Syrian sources said important military maneuvers of the Syrian army were to take place tomorrow along the border.

Sources in Beirut said they were informed that Egyptian forces, largest in the Arab League, were preparing to move into the Sinai Desert south of Palestine, and that Saudi Arabian cavalry was crossing into Egyptian territory at the invitation of the Egyptian government to participate in the cordon. Seven Saudi Arabian planes were said to have landed at Egyptian airdromes.

(An Egyptian army source in Cairo said no additional Egyptian troops were being moved into the Sinai Peninsula though some troops were already stationed there.)

Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha, league secretary, returned in mid-afternoon from Amman, capital of Trans-Jordan, where he and the Iraqi Premier, Saleh Bey el Jabri, lunched with King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan forces in the concentration. Trans-Jordan forces are reported to be the best trained and organized in the league, and the Lebanese press said they already were camping along the length of the eastern frontier of Palestine.

War Ministry sources here said Fawzi Bey Kaukji, noted leader in Palestine's Arab revolt of a decade ago who returned recently from exile in the Russian zone of Germany, was mobilizing 3000 Arab guerillas for movement to

Britain Urges All Members Of U. N. to Speed DP Havens

(By a Post Reporter)

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Britain began a new effort in the Assembly today to speed up the lagging re-settlement of displaced persons into new homelands abroad.

The British proposed to the Assembly's Palestine Committee that each member of the United Nations inform Secretary-General Trygve Lie "without delay" of what it had done to take a "fair share" of displaced persons as immigrants.

At the same time, the British called upon each member nation to "adopt urgent measures" for admitting displaced persons, in accordance with a resolution of last year's Assembly.

The British proposal puts the United States in an awkward position in view of the failure of Congress to pass the Stratton Bill, which would have admitted 100,000 displaced persons for each of four years. The American delegation will be able to report admitting only a trickle of displaced persons under th present immigration quotas.

Other countries, too, have been slow in taking displaced persons as immigrants, althuogh several have immigration officers in Europe combing the displaced persons camps for suitable settlers.

The British draft resolution, submitted to the Assembly's committee, recalled that hundreds of thousands of displaced persons still remain in camps or in areas where "they are unable to live normal lives and negage in settled occupations."

Pearl Works Strike Nears Showdown

(Pictures on Page B-1)

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Ridgely, Md., Oct. 10.—This usually sleepy Eastern Shore community—67 miles from Washington—was tense tonight in anticipation of a showdown Monday morning between striking workers and armed citizen-deputies intent on reopening the town's button factory.

Conflict was avoided this morning when the Excelsion Pearl Works plant, struck last Tuesday, failed to resume operations.

Mayor Martin L. Sutton, however, stated that the factory would reopen Monday morning, and that nonstriking employes would return "under protection" of the armed deputies. Some 40 to 50 townspeople were deputized yesterday by the community's lone police officer to "avoid a riot."

Strike Called by ILGWU

The strike, for union recognition, was called Tuesday by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (AFL) against the Excelsior company, whose officials reside in Baltimore and New York. The struck plant has some 50 employes.

Town fathers and many leading citizens of this community of 1000 are determined to reopen the button-making plant, according to Mayor Sutton. They fear hat labor firm out of town.

Half a mile away from the strike-bound plant is a new $30,000 factory building, recently erected with capital jointly raised by the Excelsior company and the local chamber of commerce. Townspeople put up $15,000—to be repaid in 10 years at 4 per cent interest—in order to help expand Excelsior's local operations and provide employment for 200 more residents, according to the mayor. The new building has not yet been put into use.

Payroll of $2500 Weekly

As it is, Excelsior has a normal weekly payroll of $2500, and is a bulwark of the community's purchasing power. As the mayor put it, if the firm moves out, "it will knock hell out of the town." The mayor himself was a contributor to the new factory construction fund, and his business sold the land for the factory addition.

Mayor Sutton said he feared violence would flare in this little town as a result of "strongarm tactics by the union." The union, on the other hand, charged that the citizen deputies were in fact union-busting vigilantes who "endangered" the safety of the strikers, and called on protection from Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.

In response, the Governor ordered State police "simuly to preserve order" but here and at Federalsburg, 21 miles away, where 200 employes of the Excelsior button-polishing plant are involved in a smiliar but quieter strike.

Charles F. Tilman, jr., union international representative, declared that the strike was for recognition. He said the union has proposed a bargaining election.

"If we lose, we'll leave," Tillman said. "If we win, we expect recognition and negotiations on wages."

Mayor Sutton said the Ridgely button workers got "good wages"—$55 a week take home pay for a 45-hour week. The union agent,

ITU Would Oust Denham From NLRB

AFL Convention To Take Action on Resolution Monday; Sen. Ball Denounced

San Francisco, Oct. 10 (AP).—A resolution calling upon President Truman to recall Robert Denham as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board was introduced at the AFL convention today by the International Typographical Union, headed by Woodruff Randolph.

The resolution also:

Demanded the replacement of Thomas Schroyer as legal counsel for the Joint Congressional Committee on Labor Management Relations

Denounced Senator Ball (R., Minn.) as "a hateful enemy of organized labor."

"Condemned" the American Newspaper Publishers Association for its current legal action against the ITU under the Taft-Hartley law.

To Act Next Week

The resolution, to be acted upon next week by the delegates, is an outgrowth of the ANPA's suit filed in Cincinnati this week charging the Typographical Union with unfair labor practices in connection with the ITU's position on future contracts with publishers.

Denham, together with NLRB Members J. Copeland Gray and former Senator Abe Murdock of Utah, are presidential interim appointees still subject to Senate confirmation.

The resolutoin charged Denham "without benefit of proper or procedure or legal hearing, expressed the opinion for the benefit of the press that the ITU policy (on labor relations) did not comply with the Taft-Hartley law."

Senator Ball, it continued, assailed ITU policy as "thinly veiled closed shop camouflage," while the ANPA was accused of attempting "to add its coercion and pressure to the already vicious and ugly pattern of pressure accumulated to influence regional directions of the NLRB and the board itself."

Submitting the resolution with Randolph were Delegates Harold Clark, John W. Austin, Barney Egan, Tillman K. Garrison and John Forster.

Meanwhile, Federation political forces were building up for an anticipated eruption on the convention floor next week over bitter controversial issues centered around the grim visaged John L. Lewis, miners' boss.

Lewis was smarting from twin defeats suffered yesterday at a belligerent, four-hour meeting of the federation's executive council.

In one, the council slapped down Lewis on his adamant stand against signing or non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley law.

In the other the council reaffirmed its position in favor of William L. (Big Bill) Hutcheson's carpenters in the two-year-old Hollywood jurisdictional battle with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes over some 350 set erection jobs in the movie studios.

In business before the convention today, Irving Brown, European representative of the AFL, appealed for labor support of the Marshall Plan for starving Europe.

The Marshall Plan, he declared, "brought the first breath of hope" to nations shaken by Communist ideological warfare, and its initiation put communism on the defensive for the first time.

Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) was cheered by the convention when he

To Comply as Far as Possible

Local Restaurants Withhold Full Participation in Drive

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

The Washington Restaurant Association decided yesterday to withhold temporarily all-out participatin in President Truman's food-sharing program.

The WRA board of directors, after a two-hour afternoon meeting, decided to tell its 1200-odd members to "comply as far as possible with President Truman's food-conservation program in general."

The brief statement from the local group, however, said that "future action" will be governed by the results of a meeting Monday morning of the rational Restaurant Industry Advisory Committee at the Mayflower Hotel here. The NRIAC is made up of leading restaurateurs.

"There's still plenty of confusion," said Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington group, "so we decided to wait and see what the NRIAC has to say."

Elsewhere in the Nation, a few restaurant associations openly went on record against the President's plan, refusing to comply with it.

George R. LeSauvage, chairman of the National Restaurant Association's government relations committee and a member of the President's citizens' food committee, has held a private meeting with CFC Chairman Charles Luckman. He denied he is opposed to the program. In a wire to Luckman yesterday morning he dismissed as "not true" a report that he favored a resolution by the Golden Gate Restaurant Association terming the President's requests "dictatorial." He insisted he stands by the NRA in its statement urging all members to go along with the program.

LeSauvage is to meet again with Luckman Monday afternoon following the NRIAC session. The local groups has scheduled another meeting for Monday night.

Individual complaints from Washington restaurant owners yesterday were directed more against the public than against the program itself. One owner told of a near fight with a customer who insisted on three servings of bread.

D. C. Numbers Operator Gets 2 to 6 Years

Stiff Sentence By Curran Seen as Crackdown Sign

Post Reporter

A two-to-six-year jail sentence yesterday served notice to numbers operators in the District that their number is up.

The sentence, stiffest meted on a charge of operating a lottery within the memory of veteran District Court observers, was pronounced against Jenkins J. Hammond, 49, of 519 2d st. nw., by Associate Justice Edward M. Curran.

Hitherto, such violators had, in general, been escaping with a suspended jail sentence plus a fine.

Had Long Record

Hammond's record showed that he was fined $50 in July, 1945, on a charge of operating a lottery. Charges of possession of lottery slips were dismissed at the same time.

In October, 1945, he forfeited $50 collateral for possession of slips and in March, 1946, he escaped with a $75 fine on a charge of operating a lottery.

In addition, Hammond had served a half-year sentence imposed several years ago on a charge of attempting to pass a counterfeit bill.

Last August, Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson announced a crackdown on lottery law violators when he promised to "jail big shots and their hirelings."

Neilson Avoided

For almost two months after that every suspect arrested on a numbers charge avoided a guilty plea before Neilson, prefering to risk a jury trial before some other judge.

Finally, last month two defendants braved Neilson's warning and were promptly rewarded with 45-day jail sentences plus fines of $100 each on a charge of possessing slips—a misdemeanor. Neilson, as a Municipal Court judge, cannot try cases of operating a lottery, which is a felony, are tried in the District Court.

Food Remarks Are Explained By Anderson

Reporter Failed to Get 'Spirit' of His Words, Secretary Declares

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said yesterday that a Chicago reporter got some of his words right on Thursday, but failed to get the "spirit" of his remarks.

Back in Washington, after a bad 20 hours of it, Anderson emphasized that he was an all-out supporter of the Adminsitration's program of meatless Tuesdays and poultryless and eggless Thursdays.

Nobody in authority here ever doubted it, but a statement attributed to Anderson on Thursday caused much consternation at the White House. The tall, amiable Secretary of Agriculture was quoted from Chicago as saying that the days of self-denial were of "little importance" in themselves and were "symbols of sacrifice." President Truman had to disavow such talk as Administration doctrine.

Anderson made this explanation yesterday:

"Someone asked if going without meat on Tuesday and eating twice as much on Wednesday helped anything and I replied that it didn't.

Didn't Catch Spirit

"A news dispatch claimed I said then that a meatless day was like going to church on Sunday—that it's a reminder. There's an element of truth in that quotation, but it fails to convey the spirit of my answer.

"I said going without meat on Tuesday and eating twice as much on Wednesday was like going to church on Sunday and ignoring the lessons of the church all the week; that if people observed a meatless day on Tuesday and gorged themselves all the rest of the week, they were acting contrary to the desires of the President's campaign and the needs of this country; that we had to save all through the week and that meatless and poultryless days were supposed to remind us every day in the week that we should run our households in a fashion that would provide grain for our export program.

"I did say . . . they were 'symbols

Recruiting for Air Force, Army Takes Another Drop

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Army and Air Force recruiting and the Nation's military manpower strength took another drop last month, defense chiefs revealed yesterday.

Triel enlisemtnts during

Total enlistments during September ran only 21,159 for both services, nearly 10 per cent short of the August total and over 20 per cent below July. The situation is regarded as serious.

This disclosure followed an earlier announcement that President Truman had nominated 5900 temporary officers, National Guardsmen and reservists for permanent commissions in the Regular Army and Air Force. Of the total, 101 were from the District, 199 were from Virginia and 91 from Maryland.

Military chiefs say that an average of 30,000 volunteers is required each month to keep the Army and Air Force up to authorized enlisted strength. That figure has not been met since last winter when the stimulus of the draft law still existed.

"We are very much disappointed at the September recruiting results," Maj. Gen. W. S. Paul, Army personnel chief, told The Washington Post. "The total is much below what we had expected."

Last month, General Eisenhower expressed concern over the declining recruiting rate and revealed

429 Million Bushels Reported as Gone; News Disappoints Nation's Grain Men

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This year's corn harvest will be 55 million bushels greater than was forecast by the Government on September 1, the Crop Reporting Board estimated yesterday.

Offsetting this good news, however, was the announcement by the board that recent "disappearance" of corn was more than the increase.

"Disappearance" in a crop report, means a lowering of stocks on hand, either through greater feeding to livestock than anticipated, or through use by industries such as breweries, distillers, syrup or starch plants, etc.

429 Millions Disappear

"Disappearance of corn for the three months ending October 1 was 429 million bushels," the board stated, "as compared with the average disappearance for the same period of 303 million bushels," or 126 million bushels more than average.

The report was received with disappointment in many grain circles. Experienced grain men had predicted an increase of from 75 to 100 million in recent days, due to improved growing conditions for late corn during September.

The total crop, as forecast in the report, totals 2458 million bushels. It still is 829 million bushels under last year's all-time record crop of 3287 bushels.

Fed to Livestock

That a great portion of the "disappearance" was fed to livestock was indicated by the report of grain stocks on farms on October 1.

This amounted to only 258 million bushels, although Government experts had expected about 350 million. The average stocks on October 1 for the 10-year period, 1936-45, was 343 million bushels, or 85 million above this year. Stocks last year were only 153 million, an all-time low, attributed to the Government drive for grain early in the year, when farmers were paid a bonus in order to draw the corn from farm stocks.

"The report, showing the unexpectedly large disappearance, indicates more than ever the need for the present drive to conserve grain, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson declared.

The tremendous, world-wide interest in the report was shown at the crop reporting room when the estimate was made public at 3 p. m. Newsmen from foreign newspapers, crowded into the small room with reporters from all parts of the United States, and interested grain men from both Government and business circles. The greatest jam in recent history filled the corridors around the board room, and overflowed into nearby offices.

Every telephone line out of the department was jammed for some time after 3 o'clock, as observers telephoned the news to outsiders. Most observers first misinterpreted the report as being optimistic until closer reading divulged the bad news contained in reports of "disappearance" in stocks on hand.

Wheat showed a slight decrease over the September 1 figures—dropping two million bushels to Millers announced an increase of 10 cents a hundred pounds for flour in the New York area.

Wreath From Truman

Of the first caskets removed, six were taken to the San Francisco city hall. There they will lie in state throughout tomorrow.

The Honda Knot dropped anchor for a short time off San Francisco's Marina Park to receive on board a wreath of leaves in the name of President Truman.

On the shore thousands stood to hear words from the Nation's heart.

Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan spoke a tribute:

"A great task must be performed . . . If we are to keep faith with those who died. Their place in history will rest upon our actions, rather than their words."

Others spoke. Their words differed, but all expressed the same thought:

" . . . that these dead shall not have died in vain . . ."

"I am very pleased by what has been done or is being prepared in Washington. I would like to be as pleased by what has been done at the United Nations. For the first, hope is certain. For the second, hope is not certain."

Recruiting Drops Again

that the excess of discharges over enlistments had cut the Army and Air Force some 10 per cent under its 1,070,000 authorized strength. The bad showing in September has reduced the actual strength even lower, it was said.

Asked what can be done to remedy the situation, General Paul said that the voting of additional funds for housing of troops should help.

Says UMT Would Help

"Passage of an universal military training law also would help us keep up to strength," he added. "UMT wil not produce men for the Army directly, but would boost recruiting as a by-product."

In another military personnel development, a program was announced whereby 5000 enlisted men and temporary warrant and commissioned officers will be appointed as permanent warrant officers of the Army and Air Force next year.

They will be selected and integrated among the present 1500 warrant officers of the two services in much the same manner as the wartime commissioned officers have been taken into the permanent officer corps.

3690 Eligible to Compete

Approximately 3690 enlisted men now hold temporary warrant appointments. They will be eligible to compete for the 5000 permanent appointments contemplated under the original integration.

Temporary commissioned officers and first sergeants, enlisted men of the first three grades who on VE Day or subsequently held the top enlisted grade in any service, and enlisted men of the first three grades who were in uniform on December 7, 1941 also are eligible.

Legislation will be presented to Congress next session, it was said, to increase the number of warrant ranks from two to four.

Test Indicates Votes Lacking To Establish Balkans Guilt

was promptly endorsed by Herschel Johnson, for the United States, who said it still would be "of the greatest value to have the precious collaboration of the USSR and Poland with the Commission."

"We hope," said Johnson, "that when they find out that the United States has no nefarious purposes, they will change their minds and join the committee."

Session Opens Stormily

Today's debate started in stormy fashion, with the excitable Alec Bebler of Yugoslavia making what sounded to other delegates like a threat. He warned the Assembly not to go ahead with its Balkan commission; once such a commission is set up, he announced, "the doors of conciliation are closed."

The delegates showed what they thought of this by voting 27 to 11 to go ahead with the selection of members of the new Balkan commission. The Peruvian delegate remarked that the boycott by the Soviet bloc "might be interpreted as a rebellion against the United Nations," and he thought the Assembly should not assent to it.

A Cuban amendment, authorizing the Balkan commission to investigate the extent of political liberty in Greece, the Balkan countries, Hungrary and Poland, was beaten by 22 to 4, with 19 absentions. An Egyptian proposal calling for the withdrawal of foreign troops fromGreece was similarly rejected by 23 to 6 with 18 absentions.

Colombia met with defeat, and with a rebuke from the United States, in proposing that the United States and Russia be barred from membership on the Balkan commission, since they were the chief parties to the dispute. Former President Alfano Lopez, of Colombia said the Greek situation was especially grave because "the United States is behind Greece and Russia is behind the Balkan neighbors of Greece."

"This is not a conflict bewteen the United States and Russia," Johnson replied for the American delegation. "It is an effort on the part of the United States to preserve the territorial integrity and the political idependence of a small and, at present, helpless state which we believe is seriously menaced."

The committe backed by rejecting the Colombian proposal by 14 to 3, with 26 abstentions.

Yugoslavia Raises New U. N. Dispute

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP). Yugoslavia today accused the United States, Britain and France of failure to arrest war criminals in their occupation zones of Europe and return them for trial to the countries in which their crimes were committed.

The United States immediately denied the charge and, in a counter-charge, asserted that Soviet-sphere countries deliberately confused war criminals with political dissidents. The subject was brought in the Legal Committee.

Arab Reports Do Not Alter British Plans

London, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—British troops still will be withdrawn from Palestine within the next several months despite Beirut reports that Arab forces are moving up to the frontier, a British Foreign Office spokesman said today.

Other high British sources said they did not believe the Arabs contemplated an actual invasion of Palestine. British advisers have urged Arab state leaders to restrain their more fanatical adherents in the hope the United Nations could reach a solution.

British military sources said they saw no special danger now in the reported troop movements, saying that Lebanon and Syria combined could hardly muster 25,000 troops, while 100,000 British troops are stationed in Palestine.

The spokesman commenting on the announcement by Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary general of the Arab League, that "dozens" of applications to join the Arab forces had been received from former British officers, the spokesman said there was nothing in British law to prevent the former officers from joining.

Haganah Rushing Reinforcements

Jerusalem, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—The Jewish underground army Haganah is hastily mobilizing its 75,000 men and rushing reinforcements to four Jewish settlements along the Lebanese-Syrian border to meet any threat of an Arab invasion, underground sources said tonight.

These sources said Jewish troops were ordered to Nahariya, Hanita, Kefar Giladi and Metulla along a 50-mile stretch of the northern frontier and call-up notices to Jewish veterans of World War II were being rushed out from Haganah headquarters.

[David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish Agency, and other Palestine Jewish sources seemed little impressed or perturbed by the reports of Arab troop movements, according to the Associated Press. ["Let them come if they want to," he said. "I believe we are ready."—Editor's note.]

India Opens U. S. Door To Clergyman

By Peter Kihss

Lake Success, Long Island, Oct. 10.—A South African clergyman, bearing petitions to the United Nations General Assembly and blocked for five weeks from getting an American visa, finally succeeded in reaching here today.

He did so after the Indian government had made representations to the United States and eventually named him an adviser to the Indian delegation.

The clergyman, the Rev. Michael G. Scott, a leader in the passive resistance movement of Asiatics and South African natives in the Union of South Africa, disclosed that he had been required by United States officials in London to agree to four conditions:

1. To remain in the United States only for the period of the Assembly meeting.
2. To enter and depart from an Atlantic port.
3. Not to proceed beyond United Nations Organization headquarters and vicinity.
4. Not to engage in extra-curricular, subversive or propaganda activities or agitation against the United States."

Mr. Scott's case was the second visa difficulty in recent weeks among foreigners wishing to attend the Assembly. Pierre Courtade, correspondent of the French Communist newspaper L'Humanite, was admitted earlier under stringent restrictions on his movements, only after representations by the U. N. itself.

14 Ex-Nazis Deny Lidice Kidnapings

Nuernberg, Germany, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Fourteen former officials of Hitler's race and settlement office, one of them a woman, pleaded not guilty today to charges of ordering the murder, imprisonment, abortion and kidnaping of eastern Europeans during the war.

Among other crimes, the defendants are charged specifically with ordering the mass kidnaping of the children of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, when the village was razed in 1942. Inge Viermetz, only woman among the accused, is held especially responsible for the kidnaping of "racially valuable" alien children in order to "weaken enemy nations and increase the populations of Germany."

Fairfax to Train Police

An eight-week training school for new Fairfax County policemen will start Monday evening at the county courthouse.

Sergt. Grafton L. Wells, supervising the course, said 11 rookies and three returned servicemen will spend three evenings a week for the next two months receiving instruction from FBI agents, the county police judge, the county coroner, and the Commonwealth's attorney.

transition period preceding full independence for the partition-made states—one Arab and one Jewish. The administrators would be three men selected from U. N. countries other than the Big Five.

The enforcement agency would be an international police force recruited from countries other than the Big Five. However, the Big Five—United States, Russia, Britain, France and China—would supply the arms and equipment needed to outfit the police force.

And, while the majority report of the investigating committee recommended a two-year transition period, Dr. Garcia Granados recommended independence for either of the two states the moment they announced and demonstrated their readiness for independence.

Southern Governors To Hear Harriman

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 10 (AP).—Governor Gregg Cherry said today that Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman would deliver the principal address at the Southern Governors' Conference at Asheville, October 19-21. Cherry, who is chairman of the conference, said Harriman would speak at a banquet October 20.

Govs. William Preston Lane of Maryland, James Nance McCord of Tennessee and Wright of Mississippi will discuss "the Southern Public School System" at an afternoon meeting October 20.

Squirrel Arrested

One of Washington's policemen suffered a chewed finger yesterday when a squirrel resisted arrest.

In response to a call, Pvt. Cecil M. Castle, 31, of Greenbelt, Md., left his scout car of the Twelfth Precinct and jovially marched into 3100 36th st. ne. There, he was told, it would be nice if he could remove the squirrel that was romping around the house.

Saragat Urges International Of Socialists

Rome, Oct. 10 (AP).—Giuseppe Saragat, moderate Socialist leader assailed as a "traitor" in the manifesto establishing the new European Communist bureau, called today for formation of "an international Socialist family as a bulwark of peace."

The declaration by the head of the anti-Communist Socialists came as police, wielding clubs, broke up a political rally of the Italian social movement, a new right-wing party, in Rome's midtown Piazza Colonna. Some of the demonstrators were taken to hospitals.

Participants were singing snatches of the "Giovinezza," Benito Mussolini's Fascist anthem, as they dispersed and moved into the Via Tritone.

The rally occurred as interest in Sunday's municipal elections in Rome reached a peak.

The police action was taken at direction of the ministry of the interior because no permission had been asked to hold the demonstration.

Saragat emphasized that his proposed international Socialist body "must not be erected against Russia, but should comprose a grouping of states with Pacific interests" to mediate between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Arabs Head For Frontier

the frontier "and possibly beyond" by Sunday.

A Lebanese war office spokesman said Lebanese and Syrian troops began moving last midnight, and other sources close to the ministry placed the number of troops in the movement at 2000.

Sheik Munir Takieadine, deputy war minister, said this was only a "token force." War Minister Emir Magid Arslan left for the frontier at noon, not expecting to return until Sunday.

Unofficial estimates here said it was believed the seven Arab nations could back their military measures with 200,000 regular troops, plus thousands of irregular guerillas and armed tribesmen.

These sources gave the following summary of the Arab armed strength:

Egypt—100,000, with some units mechanized; a considerable air force.

Trans-Jordan—The Arab Legion, British trained, has 40,000 to 50,000 men, including camel cavalry and mechanized units.

Iraq—40,000 troops, poorly mechanized but with some air power, mostly British-trained desert fighters.

Syria—15,000 troops, with some mobile units, mostly French trained and equipped. An air force of 10 fighter planes.

Lebanon—5000 soldiers, partly mechanized, most of them French trained and seasoned in the British-Free French campaign that drove Vichy forces out during the war.

Saudi Arabia—Only a small "palace army," but virtually the entire male population is armed, mounted and trained in desert tactics.

Yemen—No military force, but the populace is armed.

In addition, 10,000 guerillas were reported recruited in Syria and Lebanon and under the command of veterans of the Palestine Arab revolt of 1936-39. About 6000 Druze tribesmen were reported armed also.

Semiofficial sources at Cairo estimated that the Arab League might be able to mobilize as many as 253,000 regulars.

Paper to Promote French Interests In Swabia State

Frankfurt, Oct. 10.—A newspaper to encourage the separatism of Swabia, which comprises virtually all of the German Rhineland below Stuttgart, will be published in Dalingen, with the support of French military government, "Die Neue Zeitung" of Munich reported today.

This information, coming on the heels of the French victory in the recent election when the Saar voted for economic unity with France, gives rise here to the belief that Paris is quietly encouraging any factions which demand political autonomy in western Germanymany.

Swabia, the southwest corner of Germany which stretches as far east as Augsbourg, would be the permanent French political bridgehead across the Rhine if it could be developed into an autonomous state, according to reliable information available here.

Iwo Jima Shelters Bring 1000 Safely Through Typhoon

Iwo Jima, Oct. 10 (AP).—Underground shelters brought the 1000 Americans on this outpost isle safely through a 36-hour typhoon which destroyed or damaged every building and snatched the famous flagpole off Mount Suribachi.

There were no deaths or injuries among the Air Force, Army and Coast Guard personnel and 24 dependent families, most of which took refuge in ammunition igloos set below the surface and banked with volcanic sand. Some used old Japanese caves.

Cpl. Charles Coleman of Metter, Ga., who kept the messhal generator running for all but 12 hours, stayed on the job by parking his cot inside a huge refrigerator.

Gusts up to 170 miles an hour were recorded. The typhoon was expected to strike the southern Japanese island of Shikoku with diminished force Saturday.

Freight Rate Hike Effective on Monday

The general 10 per cent freight rate increase authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission last Tuesday will become effective next Monday on all railroads and a few water carriers.

The railroads yesterday jointly fulfilled the requirement for three days notice to the general public prior to collecting the higher charges, by filing their revised rate schedules with the ICC

New York-Washington Flyer Cars Derailed

Philadelphia, Oct. 10 (AP).—Two coaches and a diner of the Pennsylvania Railroad's New York-to-railed today as the flyer sped from Washington Legislator were de-one track to another heading toward 30th St. Station.

PRR spokesmen said many of the 300 passengers aboard the 13-car train were spilled from their seats when the cars jumped the rails but none was injured.

Va. Firemen to Hold 'Tag Day' Today

The Jefferson District Fire Department in Arlington holds its second annual "tag day" today to raise $1500 to defray department expenses.

Arlington business houses and residents have been sent tags reading: "We have contributed to the second annual tag day." Uniformed firemen are now calling to receive donations in response to the tags and to answer questions on the drive. Donations are also being reeceived by the chairman, Annual Tag Day Drive, Box 3002, Eads Station, Arlington.

U. S. to Attack 'Competing' Director Ties

The Justice Department announced yesterday it will bring court action to break up interlocking directorates among "competing" corporations.

Civil suits will be filed under the Clayton Act, it said, against certain directors in large concerns because they have refused to give up one or more of the board seats they hold.

The announcement disclosed that the department's anti-trust division has investigated 10,000 directorships in 1600 big corporations since last May 1. It said the survey showed approximately 1500 persons holding directorships in more than one company and that 60 of these were sitting on the boards of "two or more competing concerns."

The department declined to make public any names of those involved.

It said it had suggested resignations in such cases, and that "20 directors have resigned or agreed to resign from the boards of 14 corporations."

"A few have disagreed with our view of the law and have decided to await court proceedings," said Assistant Attorney General John F. Sonnett. "Accordingly, the Government will in the near future file civil suits against such directors."

hTe department said that section eight of the Clayton Anti-trust Act makes it unlawful for the same person to hold directorships in two or more competing corporations if one of the companies has capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than one million dollars. The anti-trust division's survey was made under that section.

Judge Rules Fight In Church a Draw

All was not brotherly love in Arlington's Mt. Zion Baptist Church last Sunday, a string of witnesses testified yesterday in Arlington County Court.

Fillmore Peyton, of 2111 S. Monroe st., Arlington, was charged with striking Ben Walker of 128 S. Barton st. in the church just before 11 a. m. services began. Witnesses said the pair began trading punches after Peyton won a hotly-contested election for church treasurer.

After reminding participants that a church is a place in which to maintain decorum, Judge Hugh Reid dismissed the case for lack of evidence.

55 Million More Bushels Of Corn in New Forecast

1406 million—still by long odds an all-time high.

Oats gained five million bushels in the month, but is still 268 million bushels under last year's harvest of 1509 million.

The serious drop in the corn harvest this year was indicated by the average yield per acre, which dropped to 29.2 bushels from 37.1 of a year ago.

The total production of all crops for the year will fall only about one per cent below the average for 1942-46, the board reported.

Prospects improved during September for corn, oats, flaxseed, rice, potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco and sugar beets, but declined for spring wheat, barley, buckwheat, sorghum grain, hay, dry beans, soybeans, peanuts, sugarcane, broomcorn, cotton and most fruits.

Some Set Records

All-record crops were registered in wheat, rice, sugar beets and pears.

Feed grain production however amounts to only 98 million tons, well below the total of any of the past six years, the report states.

"Supplies of feed grains on farms October 1, provide a supply per animal unit about 10 per cent below the average of the past 19 years."

"The 102 million tons of hay, plus a large carryover, provides the most liberal hay supply per animal unit on record, though some is of poor quality.

"Pastures were improved by September rains and, while not equal to a year ago, are in better-than-average condition."

The big increase in production, that held up the national average, was in food grains—grains for human consumption.

"Added to the first billion-bushel winter wheat crop," the report says, "is a spring wheat crop of 311 million bushels. The total of 1407 million bushels is 22 per cent more than 1946, the previous high mark.

"Rice production of 77 millions set a new high record." Rye is a third more than 1946, but still below average.

Citrus fruits will be less than last year, the total estimated at 49 million boxes compared with 54 a year ago.

Italy to Get Gold Seized By Germans Immediately

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States and Great Britain announced last night the "immediate" return to Italy of 28 million dollars in gold seized by the Nazis and recovered in Italy by Allied troops.

By relieving for the time being Italy's critical dollar shortage, this fund will serve to strengthen the present government's resistance to Communist pressure.

No such source of immediate aid to France, facing the end of its dollar resources October 15, has yet been found. Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said no other gold hoard under exclusive control of this country and England was available.

A 330 million dollar "pot of gold", recovered in Germany, is under control of a tripartite commission sitting at Brussels. At the instance of the United States and Britain, pro rata distribution of this fund to its original owners is scheduled to begin October 15. Italy should receive an estimated 30 to 35 million dollars additional from this source.

Found at La Fortezza

Yesterday's announcement, released simultaneously here and in London, said the 28-million-dollar hoard was discovered by troops of the American Fifth Army at La Fortezza, Italy, May 6, 1945. It represented, the announcement said, "almost the total Italian monetary gold stock remaining on Italian territory at the end of the war."

German forces in Italy had transferred all monetary gold to Milan after the Italian armistice in 1943, and then had moved it to tunnels at La Fortezza. From there, much had been transferred to Germany before the place was taken by American troops.

The gold may be held in Italy to bolster that country's currency or it may be sold to the United States for $35 an ounce.

Draws Somber Picture

A somber picture of conditions in occupied Germany was drawn yesterday by Murray D. van Wagoner, recently appointed military director of Bavaria. Back from a three-week inspection trip to Germany, the former Michigan Governor said "everybody" in Germany was hungry.

"People are roaming all over the highways," he told a news conference, "picking grass, herbs, anything they can get to eat. They are all hungry; it's just a case of degree. The German people are going through a process of slow starvation."

Chairman Taber (R., N. Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee, said in Berlin last Friday that he had seen no underfed people in a tour of Europe.

Van Wagoner, who opens his headquarters at Munich November 10, said the United States was "on the spot" because "we are trying to sell the German people our form of government because it is better than what they had or what any other country can offer." If they are permitted to go hungry, he declared, "it loks like it won't work; it doesn't make sense."

"If we fail in Germany," he added, "we may have to go through this all over again."

Americans Hated Less

He said the German people "don't love" Americans but "hate them less than they hate the Russians."

Anderson Explains Remarks; Spirit Not Caught, He Says

of sacrifice.' In response to a statement by a reporter that some restaurant operator had contended that meatless days didn't save anything, I replied that even if that were true, and I was not attempting to argue the question, such days would still be important if they remined us every day in the week that we must conserve grain; that we must be willing to accept grass-fed beef and not insist upon AA beef; that we must prefer hogs fattened to lighter weights in order to save corn, and that every day in the week, no matter whether it had a label over it or not, was a day on which we should save grain by our eating."

Secretary Anderson attended yesterday's Cabinet meeting at the White House and afterward talked to reporters about Thursday's hullabaloo.

No Divergence

He said there was absolutely no divergence of opinion as between himself, President Truman, and Charles Luckman, chairman of the Citizens Food Committee. He pointed out that he himself had recommended Luckman to the President, and that he had given 100 per cent backing to Luckman in drawing up the conservation program.

Anderson said the first thing he did upon returning to Washington yesterday morning was to telephone Luckman and tell him what really happened in Chicago.

He disclosed that Luckman had called him in Chicago before he held his press conference and before he delivered a prepared address to a meeting of insurance executives. Luckman, he said, was worried about a passage in the prepared speech, thinking it might look like a difference in opinion between them.

"I had said that the saving of grain might have to go on to the next harvest," Anderson explained, "and he (Luckman) had hopes that it might be speedy and done with."

Changed His Speech

Anderson said he changed the text gladly because Luckman felt that, with the full support of the American people, "we may be able to lick this food shortage within a period say of four months."

At the luncheon hour yesterday, Anderson and Luckman went to Capitol Hill where they had an "austerity" meal with a group of Republican lawmakers headed by Senator Owen Brewster of Maine. The meal, served in the Senate Restaurant, consisted of bean soup, applesauce, crackers and coffee.

Brewster later issued a statement on behalf of the group, saying:

"In our own interest and that of suffering humanity, every believer in American will welcome the voluntary approach to food conservation and desire to cooperate in all practical ways with all those who seek a solution along this line.

"Differences over methods may well merge in hearty cooperation to achieve the major objectives of aiding those overseas who are hungry."

Dewey Says Feed U. S. First, Then Europe

Health of America His Primary Concern; Plight of Needy Commands Help, He Adds

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 10 (INS).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared today that the United States wants to do its honest share in feeding Europe, but must give its first concern to the health of its own people.

Dewey

The New York Governor and 1944 presidential candidate spoke to the Nation by radio from the campus of Cornell University.

He said the plight of needy nations "commands America's help," but added:

"We have at the same time a prior and binding obligation to see that no American is poorly fed as a bitter result of thoughtless or badly planned generosity on our part."

He said that "millions of our families have been scrimping on food to the limit.

Cites High Costs

"The high cost of living has forced some of them to change their living habits to a point which actually threatens their health and vitality."

Apparently addressing his remarks in the direction of the Truman Administration, Governor Dewey said "pleasant or vague generalities will not do the job" of meeting the complex problems linked with high food prices, prevailing food shortages and the desperate need of grain in Europe.

"You and I," he asserted, "must know exactly what we need to do. We can then proceed to do it."

The Governor spoke in connection with the dedication of a farmer-financed $500,000 building housing the Cornell School of Nutrition. He warned that total victory has yet to be won because of the millions of hungry and starving people in the free countries of Europe.

"We all know," he said, "that hunger, chaos and dictatorship go hand in hand while an uneasy peace becomes daily more troubled. In this critical winter we can still do much to win the peace. Stark human want commands America's help."

People Must Be Taught

Gov. Dewey said the food crisis can be met if State and Nation teach the people how to make the most of what we have. New York, through its new food commission, has embarked on that task, he said.

Representative Clifford R. Hope, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, charged that there has been "too much emotion and too little thinking about food prices.

"The fact of the matter," Hope asserted, "is that . . . food prices have not advanced as fast as factory wages. Neither have they kept up with the increase in national income."

Representative Hope warned that people who by hunger are made too weak to work and too confused to think are "a perfect setup for the advance of communism, an answer to the Kremlin's prayer."

He asked if it was necessary, in this period of emergency, for the American people to eat 17 per cent better than they did for 30 years before the war.

'Stop Dewey' Angles Seen In 'Ike for President' Boom

By Lyle C. Wilson
United Press Reporter

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 10.—The Eisenhower-for-President boom out here looks and sounds like it might have some stop-Dewey angles to it.

Until General Ike takes himself definitely out of the presidential picture or announces that he can be had, the supporters of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York are talking pretty softly, if at all.

No Kansas Republican leader would dare tie himself firmly to Dewey unless Eisenhower was out of the way. If Ike should get the GOP nomination next year, President Truman wouldn't get enough votes in Kansas to be worth counting. That is the way they feel about Ike in this typical prairie State.

But if Eisenhower is not available, look for dispute in the Kansas delegation to the Republican national convention. There is a lot of sentiment here for Dewey and there is beginning to build up considerable enthusiasm for Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Both the Taft and Dewey rooters are gagged effectively until Ike makes up his mind whether he is to be a politician or the president of Columbia University, New York. He will be out here in a fortnight for a homecoming celebration at Kansas State Agricultural College of which his brother, Milton, is president. The home folk in Manhattan and Abilene, Kans., are trying to set up the show to avoid political overtones. But word already has come to Kansas that some Eastern reporters will be along to cover Ike's homecoming. They do not expect difficulty in finding some political implications in Ike's return to the grass roots.

Whether by intent or coincidence, this presidential boom for Ike has fitted perfectly into the strategy of all but the backers of Dewey. The Dewey movement simply cannot get going in Kansas unless Ike steps out of the way. Otherwise the Dewey boom already would be well advanced here. The brakes on Dewey extend well into western Missouri, too.

Hypnotized Nurse Shows No Pain During Childbirth

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—A 22-year-old nurse gave birth to a 5-pound 10-ounce boy at Johns Hopkins Hospital today under the hypnotic influence of a psychiatrist.

An obstetrician was in attendance, but did nothing. It was the hospital's first hypnosis birth.

The patient was Mrs. Margaret Kreps Petrlik, and the infant was her first. Mrs. Petrlik had her baby within three hours after entering the hospital. She remained conscious throughout the time she spent in the delivery room. Just before the infant was born, she was given a small amount of novacaine. Mrs. Petrlik, who showed no signs of any pain during birth, and her baby apparently were doing fine.

India Seeks More Wheat From Surplus

M. Asaf Ali, Indian Ambassador to the United States, yesterday pleaded for an increase in India's share of the world's surplus wheat.

Without it, he told a press conference, India faces a famine which may take the lives of millions of people.

Pointing out that more than three million Indians starved during the war while his nation was helping to feed the Allied armies, the ambassador said the prospect now was equally as gloomy, largely due to the sudden uprooting of large segments of the population as the result of the separation of Indian and Pakistan.

He stressed that India is fully prepared to pay for any food supplies made available to relieve present acute shortages.

Asked about Hindu-Moslem riots which have taken a heavy toll of lives, Ali attributed them to "counter-revolutionary elements with fascist aims" which have been in hiding until the two countries were granted independence by Britain. He predicted the disorders soon would be brought under control.

France May Get 1,500,000 Tons Of Soviet Wheat

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP).—Nine days before the French municipal elections, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs announced today it was working on a barter deal that might bring bread-hungry France 1,500,000 tons of Russia's bumper crop.

The Foreign Ministry's announcement said "the French government has addressed the Soviet government to learn if it was possible to receive 1,500,000 tons of Russian wheat from the USSR.

"M. Mikoyan, the USSR minister of foreign commerce, communicated to M. Pierre Charpentier, French charge d'affaires at Moscow, that the Soviet government had no objections to opening negotiations on this subject.

"He added that the Soviet government desired to know what commodites France would be able to deliver to the USSR as compensation for the cereals furnished."

Florida Senator Held for Fondling 12-Year-Old Girl

Chipley, Fla., Oct. 10 (AP).—State Senator E. Bert Riddle, red-haired father of nine children, waited in jail today for relatives to raise a $1000 bond and contemplated a charge of fondling a 12-year-old girl.

Riddle

Riddle, 54-year-old writer of hymns, school teacher and part-time Baptist preacher, was arrested last night on a writ of information filed by State's Attorney L. D. McRae of Chipley. He was placed in the Holmes County Jail at Bonifay.

A slender man, Riddle sat quietly in his cell. He declined comment on the charge, saying, "I haven't had time to talk to an attorney. I haven't even had time to make bond. I better not say anything."

The accused said he already had submitted his resignation as principal of the rural Poplar Springs School where the offense is alleged to have occurred last Monday.

Morgenthau Lend-Lease Story Questioned by State Official

Michael McDermott, State Department press officer, said yesterday the only agreement for extension of lend-lease to Britain he knew about was for the United States to continue assisting that nation while the war with Japan continued.

McDermott

McDermott referred to a Collier's Magazine article by Henry Morgenthau, jr., in which the former Treasury Secretary criticized President Truman's Administration for halting lease-lend aid to Europe "without warning" in mid-1945.

Morgenthau said this action scuttled the late President Roosevelt's hopes that lend-lease, a weapon of war, would become "a foundation of peace."

He said further that Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill drafted a plan at Quebec in September, 1944, providing for about $5,500,000,000 of additional American lend-lease help to Britain in the first year after VE-day.

McDermott said "the only agreements we know about had to do with pursuing the war against Japan." He added that he could not find anyone who knows whether Lend-Lease was discussed at the Quebec conference to which Morgenthau referred.

The wartime Secretary of the Treasury said that if Lend-Lease had not been "brutally terminated" by the Truman Administration four months after Roosevelt died "the world today might be on the long road to abundance and we would not be searching for a Marshall Plan to put us back on the road to recovery."

Cuban Student Killed In Clash Over Aleman

Havana, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—A student was shot and killed today during a clash between sympathizers and opponents of former Education Minister Jose Manuel Aleman.

As a student motorcade approached the Havana Institute, a shot from another group of students killed Carlos Martinez. The motorcade was in homage to Aleman who resigned after the Senate censured him for alleged participation in the abortive revolutionary expedition against Dominican President-Dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo. Orlando Simon Casas, a nephew of Commerce Minister Cesar Casas, was arrested and confessed having fired the fatal shot.

Court Asked To Reverse Brault Decree

By The Associated Press

The Maryland Court of Appeals was asked yesterday by Mrs. Margaret A. Brault of Chevy Chase to reverse a Montgomery County Court decree under which her husband, Attorney Albert E. Brault, was given a partial divorce.

Counsel for Mrs. Brault, Attorney John Sumner Wood, argued the decree was not legally valid because it was "based on conduct less than cruelty."

Mrs. Branult's conduct "constituted such cureity of treatment and excessively vicious conduct" as entitled Brault to a divorce, his attorney, F Barnard Welsh and Barnard T. Welsh, replied.

Attorney Wood charged that Brault, a former Montgomery County magistrate, "allowed himself in 1945 to become so busy at night with politics that he neglected his sick wife."

Wood said there was no proof Mrs. Brault had ever beaten Brault with her fists "and such missiles as came to hand."

Sales Tax And A Loan

Two current suggestions regarding the District's budgetary problem seem to us to merit special attention. The first is contained in the report to the Commissioners by Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler to the effect that the District's inequitable personal income tax be replaced by a sales tax. The second is the proposal of the Federation of Citizens Associations, presented by Kenneth P. Armstrong, that a long-range program of capital improvements, including means of financing them, be submitted to Congress for special legislation.

Senator Harry P. Cain's surprise visit to the Commissioners' budget hearing on Thursday apparently enhanced the prospect that District revenue laws may once more be overhauled. As head of the subcommittee in the Senate which handles District tax bills, he is keenly aware of the arbitrary character of the present income tax law. Indeed, he sponsored the Senate amendment to make the local income tax fair and workable, but the House insisted on exempting Government employes who declare themselves to be domiciled in the States, and the Senate finally acquiesced in that outrageous discrimination because there was no time to work up a new District revenue plan. The House has repeatedly demonstrated that it has no intention of permitting the personal income tax to be fairly applied. The only reasonable course left open, in our opinion, is to repeal that tax and substitute for it the sales tax.

Mrs. Ralph H. Dwan of the District League of Women Voters, which organization has opposed the sales tax in the past, told Senator Cain that if it came to a choice between having inadequate city services and having the sales tax, her group would prefer the sales tax. To our way of thinking this is equivalent to an indorsement of the sales tax; for more revenue must be raised, not only to replace the proceeds now obtained from the unfair income tax, but also to permit some expansion of health, welfare and educational services, police protection and so forth.

Even with additional revenue from a sales tax, however, very few of the public improvements that the city so urgently needs could be financed. Department heads have requested increases of some 35 million dollars for capital outlays alone. Only a fraction of these projects could be undertaken in the next fiscal year. It follows that a long-range public works program ought to be adopted with priorities for the most urgent requirements of all the departments. Such a program was worked out by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young and revised by a 16-member Citizens Planning Committee last June. The trouble is that it has not been enacted into legislation and no means of financing it have been devised. In our opinion implementation of this program is likely to become feasible only if the District can obtain a substantial loan from the Federal Government. A loan for this purpose would be amply justified by the fact that the city's sudden growth had created need for municipal facilities which cannot be financed out of current revenue.

AFL Complies

Whether or not John L. Lewis holds the title of eleventh vice president of the American Federation of Labor has little to do with his suzerainty over the United Mine Workers. Thus the action of the AFL executive council in abolishing the post of elective vice president, subject to ratification by the convention, will have no effect on Mr. Lewis' power. AFL vice presidents—there are 13 of them—have been as plentiful as their bank counterparts, and their authority has been largely confined to the letterhead. The real governing body of the AFL is the executive council, of which Mr. Lewis will remain a member. Nevertheless, the decision to do away with the vice presidencies can hardly be regarded as other than a censure of Mr. Lewis for his adamant refusal to sign the non-Communist affidavit under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Whatever the wound to Mr. Lewis' pride, we think the executive council did right in disavowing his obstinacy. Whether the non-Communist affidavit is a wise provision is not the point. It is part of the law. Although the National Labor Relations Board decided this week that pledges from top-level AFL officers were not required in order to make local unions eligible for privileges under the law, a few AFL constituent locals are in a peculiar position in that they belong to no intermediate national or international union. Some 300,000 Federal workers, for instance, are affiliated with these locals which come directly under the AFL. Thus it is conceivable that Mr. Lewis' desire to flout the law could have resulted in all these people being denied the protection of the NLRB.

So long as the United Mine Workers retain their tight control over the coal industry, it is improbable that any cases concerning them will come before the NLRB. Thus, so long as he remains the UMW chieftain, it is academic whether Mr. Lewis continues to defy the law within his own union. The AFL has taken a commendable stand, however, in refusing to allow a one-man autocracy to infringe on the rights of other workers. Moreover, we think the AFL's decision to comply with the letter of the Taft-Hartley law while seeking a change through the ballot box will redound to its credit.

Still At The Post

It is the height of folly and an invitation to reaction to allow the people to make sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice. The American people are apt to tune their cooperation not only to demonstrated need but also to statesmanship.

The day after these words appeared in our editorial columns Secretary Anderson told a Chicago audience that meatless, eggless and poultryless days were merely "symbols of sacrifice." It is possible, of course, in the light of Mr. Anderson's explanation yesterday, that this phrase, torn out of context, gave a misleading impression of the general trend of his address. Nevertheless the damage has been done. President Truman did his best to counter the defeatism, as did Mr. Luckman; but we doubt whether they were successful. Many Americans, told last Sunday that every crumb counts in the fight on hunger in western Europe—the kind of hunger that, as Secretary Anderson himself put it on that occasion, "forces the body to feed upon itself"—are bound to say applesauce to like appeals. No American is likely "to sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice." Mr. Anderson has inadvertently done a disservice to the food drive which he helped to launch last Sunday in a speech that called for conservation in the home so that the "very fiber of man" be not destroyed in Europe.

Nothing, of course, was further from the Secretary's intention than "to pull the rug" out from under Mr. Luckman; as the latter puts it. His object was to show that the real savings of grain must come at the farm where "after all, more than 75 per cent of all the grain raised is consumed." But, alas, the only way of getting the grain nowadays is by exhortation—the same kind of exhortation that Mr. Anderson last Sunday addressed to the householder. Gone are the allocation powers over foods and fats under which the President could have rationed wheat at the source. And why are we powerless today? Because Congress, in extending the allocation powers contained in the Second War Powers Act to February 28, 1948, did not include foods and fats. It seems odd, to say the least, that the President can allocate steel as between domestic and foreign consumer and is unable to do the same thing about wheat. Why did Congress balk only at foods and fats? The question may be asked what the Secretary of Agriculture was doing when this fateful decision was made?

Wisdom after the event is coupled in the Anderson case with a negative approach to the event—both this time and the last. But this is all of a piece with the half-hearted leadership which the crisis in western Europe has suffered from. Eat less we certainly must if the peoples of western Europe are not to die this winter in droves and if in desperation they are not to open their doors to the Soviet aggressor. Yet the President, scared over the reaction to the "eat less" phrase when uttered by Senator Taft, passing the buck to Congress in the matter of an extra session where he could plead for the return of his allocation powers, fell back on "waste less," and got no reaction except abuse from outraged housewives. Surely the dire challenge to our humanity and to our security should have provoked a clarion call to action instead of a feeble gesture of hand-wringing and double talk.

The President himself acknowledges that even with the minimal aid pledged till December 1, the rations in western Europe will still be on a starvation level. Seldom before in our history has it been so plain that this is a "time of challenge," a time when men in high positions must have plans to prosecute, not doubts to cast. Once again we say that it is to statesmanship as well as to demonstrated need that the American people will tune their cooperation.

Information At Home

A quarter century ago, Elihu Root pointed out the indispensability of information to a democratic conduct of foreign affairs:

> When foreign affairs were ruled by autocracies or oligarchies, the danger of war was in sinister purpose. When foreign affairs are ruled by democracies the danger of war will be in mistaken beliefs. The world will be the gainer by the change, for, while there is no human way to prevent a king from having a bad heart, there is a human way to prevent a people from having an erroneous opinion. That way is to furnish the whole people, as a part of their ordinary education, with correct information about their relations to other peoples, about the limitations upon their own rights, about their duties to respect the rights of others, about what has happened and is happening in international affairs, and about the effects upon national life of the things that are done or refused as between nations; so that the people themselves will have the means to test misinformation and appeals to prejudice and passion based upon error.

In the name of security the State Department is being converted, as we said once before, into a potential Kremlin, walled and isolated from the public, in which seekers of information, representatives of the press in particular, are treated as espionage agents. The department's recently issued Security Handbook, which is now reinforced by the loyalty order under which a "loose talker" might become a "security risk," makes a fetish of secrecy—enjoins it, as it were, for its own sake. And the new security standards threaten with dismissal and disgrace any official so much as suspected of talking with candor to any of the employers of the State Department, the American people. Let us offer as illustration of the point a single example which we can but hope is extreme. When someone from this newspaper called the department not long ago to find out the salary paid to an Assistant Secretary of State, she was told, quite soberly, that such information was confidential and could not be divulged—after two other calls to persons in the same department who referred her to this authority.

The situation is a paradoxical one in that no one understands better than Secretary Marshall the importance of developing a democratic foreign policy. "An essential part of any successful action on the part of the United States," he declared last June in broaching what is now called the Marshall Plan, "is an understanding on the part of the people of America of the character of the problem and the remedies to be applied." Such understanding is not to be produced by press handouts and formal statements of the official line. It cannot be produced by muzzling responsible officials in the State Department.

Arab Intimidation

The "ring of steel" reported to have been thrown around Palestine by members of the Arab League (egged on, doubtless, by the notorious Grand Mufti) will, we fancy, make some members of the United Nations quake much more than the Palestinian Jews. It is, of course, designed to bring pressure on the approaching U. N. debate. The "steel" is not half so important as the belligerent attitude, which is alien to the spirit of the United Nations, the body that now has the task of finding a solution of the Palestine problem.

Before the United Nations are the recommendations of its own commission. Partition, a 10-year-old solution proposed by Britain's Peel Commission and reaffirmed by half a dozen succeeding commissions, is the majority's view. There is room for compromise over the details, but the Arabs have made it clear that they are so irreconcilably opposed to partition that they will not listen to any talk about new frontiers. This position is entrenched by knowledge of the procrastination that has hitherto attended the interminable discussions about Palestine. We are not thinking only of the British. The United States is just as hesitant, though both political parties are time after time on record in favor of a Jewish "homeland," interpreted by President Wilson (not to say Mr. Lloyd George) as a Jewish state or commonwealth. With the British leaving a question mark over what they will do if a United Nations disposition of their mandate in Palestine fails of Jew-Arab agreement, it is no wonder that the Arabs are breathing fire and brimstone. Nor can we expect any courage in all these circumstances from lesser powers.

The nettle, however, has to be grasped, and it is a task the complication of which has been increased by the general wrecking tactics that the Soviet Union is pursuing in world councils. Is there the statesmanship in the United Nations outside the Soviet Union to grasp the nettle firmly? We refuse to think that all means have been tried to promote peaceful adjustment. Even the preliminaries have never been explored. By preliminaries we mean the allotment among the member nations of the United Nations of the displaced persons in Germany, including the Jews, who have become a football in the international politics of Palestine. We mean the suggestion of river conservancy works (on the model worked out by W. C. Lowdermilk in his book, Palestine, Land of Promise, which would be of incalculable benefit to Jew and Arab alike, and help both to live together in peace and progress. Time has been thrown away, however, in this preparatory work, and decision now beckons with the news of Arab movements against Palestine, as well as the approaching debate.

There are those who think that, if the United Nations refuses to impose a settlement by some sort of scratch Unoforce, the United States must take its place. With this view we cannot agree. But there is every reason—more so now that the Arabs are showing their teeth—why the Administration should boldly take its stand in the Assembly in behalf of the majority solution. A lead would then be given to the Assembly. And a vote in favor of partition could then be used as justification for taking up a development scheme under the auspices of the Economic and Social Council and settling the festering problem of the DP's in Germany.

Meantime the Arabs should be taken firmly to task for their present intimidation. They are guilty of a violation of their plighted word in the Assembly's unanimous resolution of May 15. Pending action on the report, ran the resolution, all parties and states shall "refrain from the threat or use of force, or any other action which might create an atmosphere prejudicial to an early settlement of the Palestine question."

Timid Leadership

The challenging letter of your correspondent W. S. J. S. in The Washington Post of October 4, impels me to write in support of his disapproval of the proposed advertising slogan for the "save the food" campaign and to register my own conviction that American citizens are far more willing to sacrifice and do without customary foods than our leaders appear to believe.

I have felt growing misgivings over the timid handling of the worldwide economic crisis. Overpowering evidence shows that most of western Europe, China, and parts of India are facing famine or, at least, drastic further reductions of their slim rations of food. We of the best-fed and wealthiest nation will stand in a sorry plight, to be pitied by some and hated by more, unless we waken from our dreams in our fool's paradise.

We are being asked only to "waste less." Must we be regarded as selfish children, unwilling to sacrifice and do without, even when our fellow-men are starving? Shall we not be permitted to suffer too, if we can by this means restore these others to health and make them once more able to work and produce goods for themselves?

Our leadership, political, economic, religious and educational, is too timid and out of touch with popular thinking. I would advise the Citizens Food Committee and the President and his Cabinet to have more faith in the good-will and endurance of this American people.

Most of us adults could well do without bread at two meals out of three; we could substitute vegetables for meat on three days out of seven; we could cut down our use of eggs and poultry to one day in 14. Let our churches, schools and service clubs, and the strong veterans' and labor groups, assert the privileges of Americans to follow our pioneering traditions of sharing the hunger of the community—only now that of a world-community. "Verdict On Palestine"

I was interested to read the letter by Elmer Berger of the American Council for Judaism in The Washington Post of October 4. Mr. Berger writes that the council is profoundly concerned lest the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine be "inimical to the interests of those of Jewish faith who are and wish to continue to be citizens of the United States and many other nations."

May I assure Mr. Berger that to my knowledge no one has ever been denied American citizenship because the people into which he was born enjoy sovereignty elsewhere in the world. What Mr. Berger does not understand, however, is that far from being "inimical" to the interests of those Jews who are and wish to continue to be citizens of the United States, a Jewish state would actually establish the sociological and political conditions which would insure that that citizenship would never be challenged.

More important, no longer would it be possible for crimes against the Jewish people to be committed with impunity merely because the Jews have no international standing of their own and no voice in international bodies. Mr. Berger states that the solution of the problem of Jews rests on recognition of the rights of individuals; but he forgets that it is primarily because Jews have been forced in the past to depend on the goodwill of the communities in which they live for recognition of their rights as individuals that Jews have been persecuted and slaughtered for 2000 years.

Mr. Berger also asks whether the American people would sanction tying church and state together in Palestine. Insofar as the Jews of Palestine are concerned, I should like to reply that there is no connection between the Jewish political institutions and religious institutions. Furthermore, Jews have very diversified religious beliefs ranging from the orthodox to the conservative to the reformed. There is little likelihood, therefore, that such a community would bind itself to a state-controlled religion.

Wasteful Parties

Recently I was reading the accounts in the papers of the lavish parties being given, and those planned for the Christmas holidays, and it struck me that a simply tremendous amount of food would be served at these thousands of parties all over the country, and that here was the real way to save food. All food served at parties other than luncheon or dinner parties is extra food.

I believe the American people are anxious and willing to help in every way that they can to feed the starving people of Europe, and that all they are waiting for is something constructive to work on. I am sure that the majority of the people would be only too happy to cooperate by serving food only at regular mealtimes, and not at unnecessary cocktail and after-dinner parties.

"Lee's Command"

As a long-time admirer of your editorial pages, it causes me no little pain to discover a latent schizoid tendency in your comments that threatens to get out of hand. I first noticed the symptoms when, on the one hand, you condemned the police for "pocketing" crime reports, and, on the other hand, praised Police Capt. Rhode Millikan for concealing rape reports about which she had some reasonable doubt.

But this example of editorial schizophrenia I was willing to pass up as a momentary aberration. Now, with your condemnation of Columnist Robert C. Ruark's excoriation of Gen. C. H. Lee, I find myself driven to the typewriter, possessed as strongly as any "mother of five" or "pro bono publico."

You say of Ruark: "The fact that Mr. Ruark spent only a few hours in Leghorn, the locale of much of the alleged abuse he described, is a damning indictment." The following paragraph you say: "General Lee's reputation . . . had to come from somewhere. Any man who lacks the respect of his men, as General Lee does, must be chalked up as a bad commander."

You admit that Ruark spent a few hours at the locale of the alleged abuse. You do not claim to have spent any time at the locale. Yet you condemn Lee as a bad commander on the basis of no evidence beyond the statement that his reputation "had to come from somewhere."

Whether Ruark is right or wrong, the evidence cannot be disputed that he spent more time at first-hand investigation of General Lee than the author of that editorial. Who, pray, is guilty of the "irresponsible journalism" you attribute to Ruark?

"Air Freight"

Your editorial of October 7 opens up the subject of air freight and the relationship between the scheduled, certificated carriers and the nonscheduled, irregular carriers.

We would like to make several points in this matter:

1. The independents may seem convincing, as you say, in their charge that the lowering of rates by several of the scheduled lines may be fatal as far as their future operations are concerned. But it should be recalled that the nonscheduled lines had already undercut rates in an effort to outsell the scheduled carriers. The scheduled lines are merely meeting the rates set by the cut-rate carriers themselves. That seems to us to be fair business.

2. We do not think the independents have much of a case in the claim that they have built the present air freight market. They have contributed much to the recent development of air freight, but cargo has been hauled by the scheduled airlines since one of the very first flights in the Wright brothers' planes, 37 years ago.

Last year the nonscheduled lines, while the scheduled lines were frantically trying to take care of the pent-up demand for passenger travel by utilizing all available equipment and personnel, slipped in the back door and began, just as frantically, to try to carry away the freight business.

But the mistake was in allowing them to do this with much less stringent Federal regulation for safety's sake, without any kind of a rate structure. It is always possible to make a little money for a little while on this basis and many of the operators did. But as their business grew they found that there has to be a foundation to any kind of a continuing business. That is why they claim they cannot operate now at the lowered rates. The scheduled lines obviously have the benefit of experience and the added backlog of sound regulation by Government.

3. One fact that needs clearing in this picture is the boast by the independents that theirs is a veterans' organization, seemingly opposed to a "nonveteran" scheduled organization. The scheduled airlines' personnel, in total, includes some 30,000 veterans, men and women, or about one out of every three employes.

4. The argument that air-mail pay is "subsidy" is, we think, well answered by the fact that since the inception of the Civil Aeronautics Act the balance of air-mail revenues over air-mail payments through 1946, was 140 million dollars. That represents a profit to the Government on what it looks upon as a sound, low-cost investment to civil aviation.

5. The lowering of costs to the consumer, a point you state is extremely important to the progress of American business, has been a paramount consideration of the scheduled airlines for many years. One of the few costs to the consumer to have been retained at less than prewar rates is the passenger fare on scheduled airlines.

6. What the nonscheduled lines, and perhaps the public, do not understand, is that the air transport business is a regulated industry, set up and maintained as such by virtue of the Civil Aeronautics Act. The Civil Aeronautics Act places the responsibility for promoting an economically sound and progressive air transport system upon the Civil Aeronautics Board. There is no indication of any attempt to strangle off new businesses in the field. But the safety of the public and the necessity for the best of service in every branch of the business does call for careful consideration concerning newcomers without great experience in the field.

Peace by Resolution

Women Versus Mars

THE LAST OF half a dozen international meetings of women has just ended in Paris. Primary aim of these gatherings was to improve the condition of a sick world. Several of them were specifically dedicated to preventing another shooting war.

Have these meetings done any more toward promoting peace than has the man-run United Nations? Or has their net result been only resolutions voicing lofty platitudes?

Unlike the United Nations, these conferences had no official power. But also, unlike it, they were not shackled by vetoes. They were not torn into two debating blocs. Soviet women did not attend any of the meetings. No serious conflicts arose between western socialists and capitalists.

The world was well represented at all of them. Women leaders from 50 nations attended the World Fellowship Council in Paris, most recent to conclude. Those from 26 countries were at the International Council of Women in Philadelphia. About 30 countries were represented at the International Catholic Women's League in Rome. University Women, Associated Country Women, Business and Professional Women, had delegates from all parts of the globe at their recent conclaves.

NATURALLY these groups had much routine business to transact as most of them had not met since before the war. They had to reorganize for a new start. One, the World Fellowship Council, was just getting launched. All had to reach agreement on general principles, work out programs for a completely changed world. It was too much to have expected them to come up overnight with a dramatic formula for saving humanity within the next few years or months.

Most of them adopted resolutions—at which it has become the habit in this country to laugh. The general feeling here is that women—and men as well—who adopt these then go home and forget all about them. But whether or not that is true in America, it is not in other countries where women are never in public life, and where noble sentiments still have meaning and appeal.

Foreign leaders as a rule take resolutions seriously, regard them as mandates they must try to carry out, use them as banners for rallying converts. And these conferences revealed there is now a surge on the part of women in many countries, particularly South Africa and India, to form societies, join groups, that are trying to do something about the urgent condition of the world.

Most of the resolutions dealt with long-term plans for building peace, such as the training of tomorrow's citizens, the spread of fellowship and unity among the women of the world. But two at least of the international groups committed themselves to what they regard as the basic short-term step in preventing war. It is that of trying to get more of their sex into policy-making public offices.

VIRTUALLY ALL of the organizations agreed women should be more active in political life. Some felt that a better balance of men and women in the United Nations, in diplomatic agencies, in state departments, legislative committees and other bodies that frame world policy was the most practical, immediate step that could be taken to halt international fist shaking.

Many delegates to these conferences regard their greatest gain as inspiration. To them it was as if they had attended a religious revival. Contacts with like-minded women from other parts of the world broadened their horizons, fired their spirits. "We no longer feel so alone in what we are trying to do," they say.

Foreign women leaders, long out of touch with their international groups, were strengthened and encouraged. They came mostly in made-over clothes, and many showed the effects of undernourishment and privation. Their graphic and moving accounts of their war and postwar experiences brought the other delegates closer to world realities.

Little that you can lay your hands on as an immediate hope of preventing World War III has come out of these conferences. Yet if the resolutions adopted are worked at, results may show up sooner than many expect. These pledges may amount to more than words. You cannot set ideas and flaming zeal to work among women who are mentally and spiritually the yeast of their nations and not have something happen.

Return To Rationing

Fulton Lewis, commenting on the Truman food-saving program on October 1, made one excellent point. He quoted District of Columbia statistics which reveal a considerable decrease in garbage collection tonnage in the nonration years as compared with the ration years.

If this decrease can be attributed to an already operative self-imposed "waste not" program, and if the statistics of the District are paralleled in other cities, the Truman program is foredoomed to failure.

With the wartime spirit of cooperation no longer one of this country's assets; with the realization that prices have already dictated a "waste not" program; and in view of the failure of other voluntary plans, it should be apparent that only the return of price control and rationing can avert another round of price and wage increases. Austrian Education

A Communication

TWO DIFFERENT American friends have recently sent me Mr. Fred Hechinger's column on Austrian education in The Washington Post of September 7 and Prof. Friedrich Engel-Janosi's reply to it in The Washington Post of September 19. Inasmuch as my name is used in Mr. Hechinger's article to support erroneous statements a letter to you is necessary.

To begin, I am not a "noted Hunter College sociologist" but a professor of political science, with training in history and economics; I teach international affairs. My seven weeks in Austria last May and June were for the purpose of observing the study of the social sciences in that country, on all levels.

Mr. Hechinger speaks of Austrian teachers' reaction to the use of newspapers in the classroom, which I discussed in a lecture to members of the history teachers association. The lecture dealt with problems of teaching the social studies in the United States, and the discussion of the use of newspapers was incidental to the problem of distinguishing truth from propaganda, a problem that confronts every modern citizen.

I WAS the only American present at that lecture, and I beg to report that the Austrian teachers did not dismiss the use of newspapers in the classroom with a "smile" and toss the subject off lightly. The greater number of them thought that it would not be possible to use newspapers in the classroom, especially just now.

They all thought that it would be more difficult to use newspapers in Austrian schools than in American schools, and in this judgment they were correct both from the point of view of politics and that of convenience. Many Austrian newspapers are propaganda sheets, owned by political parties, posted on partisan billboards on strategic street corners, and "read on the run." Because of their nature and variety, a teacher who tried to build class discussion around articles from these papers might be losing time that is now urgently needed to correct the errors and fill the gaps of knowledge created under the Nazi regime in the schools.

It is correct that some of the teachers objected to using newspapers on the ground that to use them would be discussing "politics"; but, in all fairness Mr. Hechinger should have stated that under Four Power directives, Austrian teachers are not permitted to discuss politics of the period since 1938.

IN SOME other respects, Mr. Hechinger's account seems to me distinctly partial and biased. Social studies are not "all but unknown" in Austria, especially on the university level. There are excellent courses in history, economics and international law at the University of Vienna.

On that level, the chief criticism from an American point of view is the emphasis of these courses on ancient times and on the Balkan area. There is relatively little study, on the university level, of the English-speaking par of the world, although interest in the English language among the students seems to be increasing.

However, the teachers in the various forms of middle schools have studied history rather than economics and government, and they also teach history with emphasis on ancient times. One course each of economics and of government is taught from a theoretical approach in the middle schools, as optional; these two courses are crowded out by the required subjects. As a result, students in the middle schools have little opportunity to learn how economic and political institutions work.

FROM THE standpoint of the social studies, the greatest needs of Austrian education today are sufficiently trained teachers and good, thorough textbooks. It is not likely that good Austrian textbooks in the social studies will be forthcoming until Austrian scholars are better able to investigate and assess the events of the years during which they lived under Nazi censorship. It will be hard to produce "satisfactory" texts while all texts must be screened by representatives of all four powers, whose views differ on what is satisfactory.

From the western point of view, one of the best methods of improving the training of Austrian teachers would be to aid numbers of teacher training school professors and students to spend six months or a year of study and observation in countries selected for their educational excellence. The United States Government might further such foreign study under an extension of the cultural work of the State Department or of the educational work of the War Department.

The Arab Threat

By Barnet Nover

Challenge To The U. N.

THE PROGRAM of action regarding Palestine which the Arab League Council has recommended to its seven members makes it clear that Russia and her satellites do not constitute the only anarchic element inside the United Nations.

NOVER

Article 2, Paragraph 5 of the Charter binds all members to "give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter."

Russia and her satellites have announced their determination to flout this provision with respect to the proposed special committee which is to watch developments in the Balkans on the spot. The Arab League states now indicate that they are determined to go their own way on the Palestine issue regardless of what the U. N. may decide.

IF ANYTHING, the stand taken by the Arab states at their recent meeting at Aaley, Lebanon, is even more outrageous than the stand taken by Russia at Lake Success.

Vishinsky said, and his words were echoed by representatives of Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, White Russia and the Ukraine, that regardless of what the General Assembly does, the Soviet bloc will not participate in the selection of the proposed Balkan committee. Nor will they serve on it.

From the viewpoint of the proper functioning of the U. N., this anarchic attitude is bad enough. At least Russia and her satellites do not propose to take forcible action to prevent the Balkan committee from being set up or, after it is set up, from operating.

Such forcible action to sabotage a United Nations decision is contemplated in the Arab League Council's program of action. The seven Arab League states are urged to send military forces to Palestine with the purpose of moving in and occupying the country when and if British forces are withdrawn from it.

GIVEN THE composition of the Arab League Council this proposal is much more than a recommendation.

The council consists of the heads of all the Arab League governments except Saudi Arabia and Yemen. Those nations were represented at the Aaley meeting by high-ranking ministers. It is a reasonable assumption, therefore, that the council's program is the program of the Arab League states.

As such it constitutes a threat by six U. N. members—Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Syria, Lebanon and Iraq, and one would-be member, Transjordan—to take the law into their own hands if the decision of the General Assembly on the Palestine issue is not to their liking.

In effect, what these seven nations are saying to the U. N. is: Either you will let us have our way voluntarily or we'll use force to have our will prevail.

The U. N. can submit to that threat only to its own ruin.

THERE IS, to be sure, a very considerable measure of bluff in the Arab League Council's stand. Only one of the seven Arab states has anything resembling a modern force. That is Transjordan whose small but efficient army is British-trained, British-equipped and, very largely, British led. It will only move if Britain gives the word.

The largest army in any of the Arab states is that of Egypt. That army is said to number 25,000, a force negligible not only as to numbers but even more as to fighting capacity, considered in modern military terms.

The army of Ibn Saud in Saudi Arabia, probably greater in numbers, is even more of a museum piece. The armies of Iraq, Syria, Lebanon are only in process of creation.

On the other hand, the Zionist defense forces are believed to be capable of holding its own.

This was the testimony of General D'Arcy, then commander-in-chief of the British forces in Palestine, in the testimony he gave to the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry. It is the contention of other observers as well.

SHOULD THE BRITISH clear out of Palestine, as they insist they are going to do, the responsibility for the maintenance of order will fall on the United Nations, as the heir of the League of Nations which gave Britain the mandate over Palestine.

The United Nations cannot shirk this responsibility.

Once it has decided on a course of action it must carry it out.

To do less than that, to submit to threats whether genuine or a bluff, would mean a blow to the U. N.'s prestige from which it might never recover.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Our Narrow Diplomacy

PARIS, FRANCE.—The chief failure of American diplomacy in the two years since the end of the war stands out conspicuously at this moment when Europe is divided between East and West. It is primarily a failure to come into contact with and to understand the political leaders on the left who are not attached to communism.

Childs

Far more might have been done to win these men over to the belief that the United States stands for true democracy and that no intervention in the affairs of another government is implied by American aid. Unfortunately, American diplomacy is not geared to such a task.

These leaders are for the most part Socialists or Social-Democrats whose economic and political views closely parallel those of the Labor leaders now in power in Great Britain. They abhor revolution and totalitarianism. They believe that socialism can be achieved by democratic means through the convictions of a majority of the people.

IN ITALY leaders of this type, representing minor parties, are fairly important. Despite the years of fascism, Italian socialism on the democratic British model had deep roots that have been revived since the overthrow of Mussolini. The non-Communist left has considerable strength here in France.

These forces in Europe have tended in general in the past two years to drift toward communism. Thus, in Italy, Pietro Nenni has led the majority of the Socialist Party into a union with the Communist Party. He told me in an interview in Rome that he felt compelled to take this step in order to try to save his party from obliteration. If he had not taken it his following would have gone over to communism, feeling there was no alternative.

AT A CRITICAL MOMENT, of course, when the Communists were appealing for a united front of the left to oust the De Gasperi government, Giuseppe Saragat, leader of the right wing Socialists, threw in his lot with the United States and the Marshall Plan. While he has 51 seats in the Parliament, there seems to be considerable doubt as to the extent of Saragat's popular following.

Failure to win over the moderate left is not so much the fault of individuals. The American diplomatic approach, following the early British pattern, simply does not cover a sufficient range to take in politicians and political parties on the periphery of power.

In the tradition of the diplomacy of the past, all power was centered in the government—actually in the King or in the King's mistress. The diplomat was a personal representative from one monarch to another and, therefore, his whole horizon was bounded by the court and the little court circle with its intrigues and conspiracies.

The British appear to have done far more than we have to break away from this outmoded tradition. When he was foreign secretary, Anthony Eden initiated drastic changes. While the hand of tradition still rests heavily on that sacred precinct, the light of the present-day world has begun to filter into the foreign office.

American embassies and legations now have labor attaches who specialize in reporting on labor problems. They seem for the most part to be able and alert with a broad knowledge of their field. But they work within the confines of a job with definite bureaucratic limitations. Those limits do not include political contact or political reporting.

The labor attache knows that he may get his fingers burned if he oversteps the limits of his job. So he stays within bounds even though he may be aware of a vast field unexplored and related to American interest.

IT IS AT this point that you see clearly what a tragic mistake it was for Congress to curtail so drastically the United States Information Service. Information officers were developing relationships outside the sphere of government. Editors of varying shades of political opinion were assured of American interest. Then abruptly this was chopped down almost to nothing.

Take the British example as a contrast. The British maintain information offices in a half dozen key provincial cities in France. The British themselves feel that the most important function of those offices is the opportunity they afford for Britishers with a knowledge of France to come in friendly contact with editors and politicians. This is a two-way street—knowledge is given and obtained.

The United States Information Service had officers in two cities outside Paris. They are now closed because of the short-sighted economy of the last Congress. A special congressional committee touring more than a dozen European capitals to explore this very question already has become convinced of the need for an expanded information service, according to Chairman Karl Mundt of South Dakota.

The entire horizon of American interest must be expanded. This is essential for greater understanding of the complex world in which we are living. It is also essential if we are to take the leadership implied in the Marshall Plan.

U. S. Seizes Leader Of Austrian Reds

Vienna, Oct. 10 (AP).—United States Army officials announced today the arrest of Joseph Bloderer, secretary of the Communist Party in American-occupied upper Austria, on suspicion of being involved in a possible sabotage attempt against American military installations.

Earlier this week Franz Haselberger, a minor Communist Party official in Linz, was arrested on a charge of possessing explosive powder.

Permanent Residents Wary About Treating Inhabitants of Migrant Camps Too Well

(Sixth of a Series)

By Agnes E. Meyer

As a rule, both the nearby rural towns and the city people are at a loss what to do about the inhabitants of the migrant camps. When they are not actively hostile, they fail to grasp the importance of these workers to their very existence. Yet these communities are often wholly dependent upon the adjacent agriculture. An acute fear exists among the permanent residents that if they treat the migrants too well, they will settle down permanently and become both a relief and a racial problem after the crops have been harvested.

If only the women in comfortable homes could understand how hard is the life of these migrant mothers! All over the country, whether they be Negroes, Mexican-Americans or Anglos, as the native stock is called, they face the same ordeals. On the journey in close-packed trucks, they must care for the babies, the helpless grandparents who cannot be left at home alone, the children who sicken because they cannot stand the bad diets or polluted water supplies. I shall never forget a scene in one miserable Texas cabin where some 30 people, young and old, sat in silent melancholy around the doll-like body of a child in an elaborate coffin. They had sacrificed their savings and two days pay to celebrate death, as if it were their only means of realizing the value and the sacredness of life.

Rise Before Dawn

In the New York camps the mothers rise before dawn to prepare breakfast and get the whole family ready for the long day's toil. They work with the men in the fields until sundown. Yet when they come home, they have to cook, wash clothes and clean the overcrowded cabins. After the return from work I could hear them trying to surmount the disorder of their existence. The husbands are implored to help with the chores, usually in vain; the children are urged to wash the heavy soil from hands and faces before eating and to say their prayers before going to bed. In spite of all the efforts being made, four or five children of both sexes and all ages still live in one room with their parents. This to be sure no longer shocks me as it used to, now that I have seen six to 12 people living in a single room in some of our big cities.

Certainly the antiquated planning used in these camps is no help to the women. The best camps have a two-burner gas or electric stove in the cabins but usually the communal cook shacks, which all the women hate, the showers, the laundries and dining rooms are scattered about without consideration for efficiency. Realizing this, the State Extension Service has engaged Mrs. Esther McAllister, a specialist in home economics with much experience among low income groups, to study these migrant families and decide what can be done to improve camp planning, to simplify living conditions and protect the development of the unfortunate children.

Appreciate Program

Many of the mothers I interviewed in New York already show keen appreciation of the health, welfare and nutrition programs. They take pride in sending their children to the nursery school with faces and starched pinafores glistening with cleanliness.

It is a great mistake to think these migrants are stupid just because they are timid and inarticulate. So many of the illiterate parents now realize the importance of education for their children, that in camp after camp I found them leaving to arrive back home in Florida for the opening day in school. At Kings Ferry Camp in Cayuga County, the migrant children have been made so welcome in the local school, both by teachers and pupils, that the little colored children were waiting impatiently for the opening day and a renewal of warm friendships made in previous years with the local youngsters. But the very intelligent Negro manager of this camp, F. H. Townsend, has no illusions about the effects of this kind of life on the young. "Their education is bound to be sketchy" he said, "the pride of belonging to a community is denied them and the importance of citizenship cannot be instilled in them. The congestion in the camps creates disturbances and immorality. When workers come into the camps as man and wife, we can't ask for marriage certificates, and the children see everything that goes on. Before we can ever be just to these migrants, before our country can fully develop its human resources, our economy will have to provide a life by which more people can stay put."

Excellent Example

Kings Ferry is an excellent example of the very considerable improvements brought about in migrant camps by the cooperative endeavors of the New York State Interdepartmental Committee. A few years ago it was the scene of murders, knifing, drinking, gambling and general turmoil. The moral and physical conditions horrified the local citizens. Now it is an orderly camp housing 663 workers, with four dining rooms, kitchens and commissaries, managed for each of the four groups by their respective crew leaders.

The records of the State police who inspect all camps for safety, sanitation and type of population, reflect the progress of law and order among this year's 15,000 migrants. Last year 260 arrests were made, this year 44, none of them major criminal offenses.

(Tomorrow Mrs. Meyer tells where the migrant problem should be attacked.)

Britain and U. S. Discussing Swap On Trade Barriers

London, Oct. 10 (AP).—An authoritative source said tonight new concessions in lowering American tariffs and imperial preference were being offered in British-American negotiations in Washington and an agreement might be reached "in a week or two."

His disclosure came two days after Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister for Economic Affairs, said he was "hopeful" that the tariff deadlock would be broken. Sir Stafford has been taking an active part in the Geneva Trade Conference.

The informant said no definite agreement yet had been reached in Washington, but new proposals offered "a good chance of agreement."

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 10 (AP).—A legislative act to outlaw the Communist Party in Alabama and provide swift pnalties for subversive activity became law today with the signature of Gov. James E. Folsom.

Romania Is Reported Ready to Give Up Gold

Bucharest, Oct. 10 (AP).—Dreptapea Noua, newspaper of the governmental National Peasant Party, said today the Romanian cabinet had decided to hand over to the United States, Great Britain and France 18 tons of gold in final payment of claims of Romanian gold abroad they believe to be of German origin.

(The value of 18 metric tons of gold is $22,216,320.)

The report said the 18 tons were at the national bank of Switzerland at Bern. The newspaper said the cabinet decision was prompted by a United States and British note in August demanding cession of German gold in Romania's possession in compliance with the peace treaty.

Vets Convert Church Cellar into Social Room

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

For 20 years folks around Luther Place Memorial Church have been talking about converting the coal cellar into a recreation room.

It took a group of war veterans, led by Grant Hagen, to finally tackle the job.

The result is that the young folks will hold their first fellowship social Thursday at 8 p. m. in this new basement lounge.

"The job was done entirely by these veterans, from the laying of the concrete floor to the purchase of a built-in radio and record player," says Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor.

Hagen, a Navy lieutenant in World War II, is now employed at the Taylor Model Basin, Naval Research Laboratory, Cabin John, Md. Other former servicemen who helped on the recreation room project were Michael Mihovich, Jean Yeats, Henry Seidel, Paul Hermsmire, Edmund Klemmer, James Mills, Erby Price, Walter Dawson, Ralph Doering and Daniel Gromsi. Others who aided were Kenneth Phelps and Arnold Sorenson, who were in Government service here during the war years.

SENATE CHAPLAIN'S ANNIVERSARY

Dr. Peter Marshall, Senate chaplain, tomorrow and in the coming week will mark his tenth anniversary as pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

He will deliver his anniversary sermon tomorrow at 11 a. m., and Tuesday at 8 p. m. fellow clergymen will lead testimonials to him at a congregational reception. They will be Drs. Edward Hughes Pruden, First Baptist Church; Clarence W. Cranford, Calvary Baptist Church, and John W. Rustin, Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

The Men's Bible Class of the church will observe Ladies' Day at 9:30 a. m., when Dr. Marshall will be among the speakers. During Dr. Marshall's ministry, his flock had paid off a $130,000 church debt; raised $175,000 toward a new church, inaugurated additional Sunday morning services to accommodate the crowds, and made other notable progress.

NEW MINISTER TO YOUTH

The Rev. Franklin B. Gillespie, former pastor of Lewinsville (Va.) Presbyterian Church, brings much experience to his new position as minister to youth at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Last summer he directed the Presbyterian Young People's Conference at Hood College, Frederick, Md., and at his Lewinsville pastorate did conspicuous work in religious education and other youth work. He is former moderator of the Washington City Presbytery.

FATHER O'CONNOR INVITED

The Rev. F. J. O'Connor, assistant professor of sacred eloquence in the School of Sacred Theology of the Catholic University of America, has been invited by the Most Rev. Thomas J. Toolen, Bishop of Mobile, to make the chief address at the outdoor ceremonies in Rickwood Park, Birmingham, Ala., October 19 in anticipation of the Feast of Christ Our King, which falls on October 26.

FORMER PASTOR RETURNS

Members of Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol st., tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. will welcome as guest preacher their former copastor, the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, now pastor of Buffalo's Holy Trinity Church.

DR. FOELSCH RESIGNS

Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, one-time pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, has resigned as president of Chicago Theological Seminary, Maywood, Ill., to become pastor of New York City's famous Holy Trinity Lutheran Church.

Woman Seeking 15th Divorce Has Hope of Romance

Brooks, Oreg., Oct. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Betty M. Dunlavy, 40, who is now suing for her fifteenth divorce, expressed hope today that the "right man" might still come along.

Her divorce suit against 32-year-old John S. Dunlavy on a charge of cruel and inhuman treatment is pending in circuit court.

Mrs. Dunlavy

Flipping pancakes in the restaurant she owns here, the attractive brunette said 15 unlucky trials have not turned her against marriage.

She has not had quite as many men in her life as the court record of 15 marriages in 22 years would indicate. She wed one of her husbands twice, and another husband three times.

CIO Squabble Ends as Miners Cast 'No' Vote

Boston, Oct. 10 (AP).—One of the bitterest international squabbles in the CIO—between the mine, mill and smelter workers and the shipbuilding workers — was officially marked "ended" today with nothing done about the leadership of the former union for the present.

It was a mine, mill and smelter representative's "no" vote that blocked action.

For the second time in six months, the 52-man CIO executive board charged officers of mine, mill and smelter with having allowed Communist influence to interfere with union affairs.

Administration Sought

The board approved a report demanding that these officers, including President Maurice Travis, step aside and let a CIO-appointed administrator govern the union until its internal dissention was healed.

The union's own "no" vote against the report, cast by Reid Robinson, representative of the mine, mill and smelters, blocked any action. It was the only "no" vote cast on the question of accepting the report.

Since the executive board had no authority to enforce its decision, and the union concerned would not approve the recommendation, Murray told reporters "the dispute is ended" and won't come before the convention, which starts here Monday.

If the report had come before the convention, a bitter debate might have taken place.

The action was another sign that CIO President Philip Murray was succeeding in his annual task of settling arguments behind closed doors so that the CIO convention can be conducted with peace and unity.

Other Actions Taken

The executive board also took these actions:

1. Indorsed the 17-week-old strike of CIO Shipbuilding Workers against Bethehem Steel and United States Steel, and pledged its "unlimited financial and moral support."

Murray said the two companies have "violated every decent code of ethics." He said from 35,000 to 40,000 workers are on strike in ship yards at Baltimore and elsewhere, seeking to continue their seniority system and grievance procedures.

2. Attacked the Taft-Hartley labor law, but said each CIO union must make up its own mind whether rto deal with the National Labor Relations Board under that law.

This was no surprise. Murray said the board's policy statement need not be approved by the convention.

The complicated mine, mill and smelter dispute grew out of the secession of 26,000 members of that union, dissatisfied with the union's internal affairs. They joined the shipbuilding workers.

Besides calling for these officers to step aside, the report recommended that the shipbuilding workers expel the 26,000 workers and called for the removal of John Driscoll as secretary of the Connecticut CIO council because he led the seceding workers.

The conditions were not carried out.

John Green, president of the shipbuilding workers, wa sabsent from today's meeting.

are all former prosecutors. Associate Justice David A. Pine, who in the past has announced his conviction that numbers law violators should be severely dealt with, is a former United States attorney for the District, as is Curran. Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech is a former corporation counsel.

Crackdown Seen

This, court observors feel, bodes no good for those convicted of lottery law violations, especially if they have a past record of similar offenses.

Neither, Curran, Pine nor Keech would comment as to whether a general crackdown is officially in the offing.

Hammond, who was found guilty on six counts of operating a lottery, was liable to a maximum of three years plus $1000 fine on each count or a total of 18 years and $6000.

AFL Parley Gets Resolution Asking Ouster of Denham called upon "liberals" of the Republican Party to fight for a progressive program to "represent the rank and file of the United States."

Langer, invited to the platform by AFL President William Green for an unscheduled appearance, urged fellow Republicans to be "a true friend of the labor movement."

Green introduced the North Dakotan as a Congressman who "stood with us like a stone wall" in the fight against the Taft-Hartley bill.

Langer told reporters that he and Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) would reintroduce a bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley law at the next session of Congress.

Convention business was suspended briefly to pay solemn tribute to Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the AFL, who suffered a fatal stroke Wednesday in the midst of an attack on the Taft-Hartley law.

Padway's body, flanked by floral wreaths and with candles burning at the foot of his casket, lay in state at the front of the darkened convention hall during memorial services conducted by Rabbi Morris Goldstein.

President William Green in a brief eulogy said "we will write on the tablets of our hearts that Judge Padway gave his life to the labor movement."

Businessmen Hold Rent Board Reins

Post Survey Shows They Make Up Greatest Single Group on Most Boards

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The boards that run what is left of Federal rent control are made up more of businessmen than anything else.

Next come real estate men, and then labor spokesmen, lawyers and bankers.

President Truman and Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon both say Creedon has no choice but to grant rent boosts, or end controls, when the boards wish it.

5.6 Members Average

Here is a sample board, based on analysis by The Washington Post of the lists of members of 179 of the boards that were appointed by Creedon:

There is an average of 5.6 members per board.

20 per cent of them are businessmen—druggists, harware dealers, auto dealers, drygoods men, feed merchants, jewelers, corporation officials and the like.

11 per cent are in the real estate business.

5 per cent of them are labor spokesmen,or are so listed.

5 per cent are lawyers.

5 percent are bankers.

3 per cent are insurance men.

3 per cent are professional men, doctors, dentists and the like.

1 per cent are lister as "renters."

15 per cent miscellaneous groups, and

32 per cent are mystery men—Creedon's lists that are open to the publci do not show what they are or whom they speak for.

The 179 boards studied by The Washington Post had 1030 members in all.

The lists of members show 210 businessmen, 107 real estate men, 57 labor spokesmen, 54 bankers, 51 lawyers, 27 insurance men, 24 professional men, 18 State county and city officials, 17 publishers and editors, 16 "veterants," 15 railroad men, 12 teachers and educators, 11 "renters," 10 public utility officials or workmen, 9 retired persons, 9 housewives, 8 officials of veterans organizations, 8 Chamber of Commerce spokesmen, 8 farmers, 8 hotel men, 7 club women, 7 landlords, 5 Government workers, 4 miscellaneous workers, 3 clergymen or religious workers and 325 unclassified members.

Here's how these boards were picked:

The law says the expediter—that's Creedon—shall set up ineach rental area "a local advisory board, each such board to consist of not less than five members who are representative citizens of the area, to be appointed from recommendations made by the respective Governors."

That is, Creedon is supposed to set up representative boards, taking the members from lists given him by the State Governors.

Asked Nominations

When Creedon took over rent control from the OPA he asked the Governors for nominations, saying a "representative" board would be a cross section of the community, especially of landlords and tenants. But many Governors sent in lists that did not show what the members were, or for whom they spoke. For some time the men on such lists were appointed without question. Creedon's office yesterday could not say how many such boards were named.

Later, Creedon's staff began asking areas for data on such lists. Sometimes they got it, sometimes they did not. Creedon's office could not say yesterday how many times information came in, or whether any appointment ever was held up because there was nothing to show whom the nominee represented.

Of the 1030 board member members on the 179 board lists analyzed by The Washington Post, 325 were such mystery members. They made up all—or a majority—of the members of about 50 of the 179 boards.

Some Data Available

There were cases when the data did come into Creedon's office and shows in the lists open to the public. For instance, there was the Salinas, Kans., board which has approved a 15 per cent rent boost for one county and the end of controls for two more. At first unclassified, the members of this board turned out to be three real estate men, one banker and one labor spokesman.

Both Under Fire

Both Creedon and President Truman yesterday were under fire for their ruling that Creedon must approve local board recommendations for decontrol or rent increases.

Chet Paterson, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee (AVC) said Creedon was scuttling rent control. Paterson charged Creedon with hiding behind the words of the law when conveenient, and ignoring the law when he found its words inconvenient.

Harvey Brown, president of the Machinists Union, yesterday followed up his demand that Creedon be fired in a front page article in The Machinist.

The Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action yesterday told President Truman he was wrong about Creedon having to rubber-stamp local board actions, urging the President to get an opinion from Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Nearby Grain Crop Yields Pe Acre Average Higher Than Those Elsewhere In Nation

Grain crops in States near Washington average far better than for the rest of the country, the official Government estimate of the Crop Reporting Board revealed yesterday.

Corn in the Washington area showed the average yields per acre much above the national average. The national average was 29.2 bushels. Maryland averaged 36 bushels, Virginia 33½, West Virginia 40 and Delaware 31.

A generally higher yield was indicated for wheat. The national average for wheat was 19 bushels an acre; for Maryland 21½, West Virginia 20; Virginia 17½ and Delaware 19½ bushels.

In oats the States near Washington were slightly below the national average of 31.7 bushels. Maryland averaged 32 bushels, Virginia 27, West Virginia 27½ and Delaware 29.

The apple crop is "turning out a little larger than was expected in Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia," the report said.

"Virginia, with 4,509,000 bushels, has only about a third of the production of last year. The crop in the Roanoke and Patrick County areas, where a large proportion of the production is usually sold to truckers, is relatively better off than in other areas. In both Virginia and West Virginia processors are taking a large proportion of the crop."

Virginia was one of five States out of the 21 largest milk producers where September milk production was the highest on record. In addition, milk output per cow set a new record for the month in Virginia.

The national average for milk produced per cow was 14.48 pounds in September. In Maryland the average was 17.7 pounds; Virginia, 15.4, and West Virginia, 14.2.

Hughes Aide Asks Blood Test

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—At his own request, Rotund John W. Meyer, Howard Hughes' free-spending press agent, will have a blood test in reply to a charge he is the father of a slender, blond cigarette girl's eight-month-old son.

Special Sessions Justice Frederick L. Hackenburg today granted the request made by Meyer's attorney, Jerome A. Strauss, and set trial on the charge for December 4.

Strauss entered a denial that Meyer is the father of the son of Patricia Miles, a nightclub cigarette girl, who swore out a warrant against him when he was testifying in the Senate War Investigating Committee probe of Hughes' airplane contracts.

Meyer, free on $500 bail after his arrest at the El Morocco nightclub early Wednesday, did not appear in court. When Miss Miles' attorney, Elvin I. Unterman, contended that his bail should should be raised to $5000, Strauss replied Meyer "is amenable to the court and will be in court on any date set by the court."

His bail remained at $500.

Lawyers in the court said blood tests are inconclusive and while they may prove a man is not the father of a child they do not necessarily prove he is the father.

When Miss Miles swore out the warrant against Meyer he denied her charges, declaring, "I never took her out in my life" and adding, "she worked until 5 a. m."

'Green Bowl' Is Exonerated in Navy Probe

By The Associated Press

The Naval Academy's secret society, the "Green Bowlers," has been absolved of charges that it is a "vicious" officers' clique, the unofficial service publication, Armed Force, said last night.

Rear Admiral Frank J. Lowry, who conducted an investigation of the society, told Admiral Nimitz he had been unable to find a single example of a Navy or Marine officer who received plush jobs or fast promotion because of membership in the Green Bowl, the magazine said.

John G. Crommelin, naval captain and skipper of the carrier Saipan, told a House Armed Services Committee last summer that the Green Bowl was an innocently-started group that had grown vicious through the years.

Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey, vice chief of naval operations, told a reporter subsequently that the society was of no effect in promoting members' careers. He called it an undergraduate group which had off-the-campus social meetings, a "schoolboy thing" designed to circumvent Navy regulations against drinking.

The publication Armed Force said that the percentage of Green Bowlers holding top level naval jobs was not excessively high despite the fact that midshipmen tapped for membership "almost always were honor men of the class, outstanding athletes or outstanding personalities."

Armed Force listed 355 midshipmen it said were chosen for Green Bowl membership between the founding year, 1909, and 1940, when the society was ordered disbanded.

Of these, 35 attained flag rank. 18 of them still on active duty. There were 279 flag officers in the Navy October 1.

Printers Local Files Answer To Baltimore NLRB Case

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Baltimore Local 12 of the International Typographical Union today answered the first unfair labor practice complaint ever filed against a union with an assertion the Taft-Hartley law is unconstitutional because it imposes "involuntary servitude."

A National Labor Relations Board hearing is scheduled here next Tuesday on a complaint by the NLRB's general counsel that the international and its local refused to bargain collectively with the Baltimore Graphic Arts League, an association of 22 printing firms.

The action arose from a recently adopted policy of the ITU not to sign contracts but to work instead under posted "conditions of employment." The policy is considered a means of avoiding the Taft-Hartley law's ban on closed shops.

Four Points Raised

In its answer to the NLRB complaint, the union today charged the Taft-Hartley law is unconstitutional because:

1. It deprives union members of their right to contract freely on a closed shop, union security, health and welfare funds, and check-off of dues.

2. It obliges unions to file financial statements and sign non-Communist affidavits in order to use the NLRB but imposes no equivalent obligation upon employers.

3. It conditions rights of persons "upon the beliefs of others over whic hthey have no control and (conditions) Federal rights and access to Government agencies upon arbitrary and discriminatory classification based on political belief.

4. It imposes involuntary servitude on union members by denying them the right to seek work or refuse to sell their labor "upon such terms and conditions as they deem fair and reasonable."

Vote On Offer Sunday

After the complaint was issued, the union announced it would sign a contract if one could be agreed upon.

The Graphic Arts League announced last night the union had "flatly rejected" two wage offers and negotiations had reached an impasse.

However, Charles W. Brannock, president of the local, said the union had not rejected an offer of a 25-cent-per-hour raise o cover the interim period until a new contractis signed, but that in would be presented to the membership at a meeting Sunday.

Both sides were agreed he union had turned down a proposal of a 40-cent-per-hour wage hike—the full union demand—providing the union would agree to sign a contract which the print shops said consisted of "the essential elemens of the expired contract, excluding the illegal clauses, namely, closed shop and struck work."

U. S. to Combat Oil Shortage With 96 Laid-Up Tankers

Serious difficulties in the supply of petroleum products here an dabroad sent Government and industry into action yesterday.

On the international front, where the problem is one of transportation, the White House announced that this country will put 96 laid up oil tankers into use.

Domestically, the problem was "sudden and drastic" new demands from the Army and Navy for avistio nand motor gasoline, according to a report from the National Petroleum Cuncil.

The council argued the petroleum industry to produce high octane aviation fuel "wherever possible' 'to meet the new demands, and said that the industry's output of diesel and special fuel oil is "far below" the amounts requested by the armed services.

Announced by Steelman

The White House announcement on the re-use of the laid up tankers was made by John R. Steelman, assistant to the President.

The Navy will recondition and put into operation 26 tankers in its laid up fleet. These will be operated for the Navy by private shipping companies and merchant crews.

The Maritime Commission will recondition 24 militarized type tankers now laid up.

These two actions together, Steelman said, will release to private industry some 50 merchant tankers now carrying oil for the military establishment.

In addition, he said, the Maritime Commission will sell 46 merchant tankers from laid up fleets to foreign countries which will recondition and operate them.

The decision to make them available, he said, was reached at a White House meting yesterday of officials of various Government agencies.

Cites Two Major Factors

Explaining the domestic military shortage of aviation and other fuel, the National Petroleum Council, an industry advisory group, cited two major factors:

1. Original estimates last May 28 of needs for the 12 months which began July 1, were based upon fuel consumption during a period when military services had insufficient number of mechanics. This situation was corrected more "rapidly than expected" resulting in an increase in aircraft service and fuel consumption.

2. The mose recent increases in fuel requirements result from "changes in operational plans" which put additional aircraft into commission. The council advised the petroleum industry that the armed services might make further increases in their gasoline and oil requirements in the near future. Despite the increases, the council said, the industry already has met 99.2 per cent of aviation fuel requirements and 95 per cent of motor gasoline needs for the first half of the fiscal year, which started in July.

The council also released a letter from Navy Capt. Ralph E. Wilson of the Army-Navy Petroleum Board, noting that Navy requirements of 5,151,400 gallons of aviation lubricating oils for the fiscal year have been met only to the extent of 2,600,000 gallons. Wilson asked oil companies to increase their Navy offerings.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 10.—Some day soon, preferably on October 12, the 2500 midshipmen and the Navy football players would like to pick up a Sunday morning newspaper and find some pleasant reading. That goes as well for the Navy coaches. Ten straight football defeats have been pretty dismaying to this community.

POVICH

Head Coach Tom Hamilton has never abandoned one routine, even in the face of what has been happening to his football teams. Win or lose, it's open house in Hamilton's hotel after each Saturday game, but he's weary of condolence. He works up a hearty handshake for his well-wishers in those sessions, but it would be more fun if Navy had something to celebrate.

It's always a long, dreary Saturday night for a losing coach. Wallace Wade, the Duke coach who sends his team against Navy at Baltimore tomorrow, once expressed it for every losing coach. He ducked out of one of those post-game sessions abruptly, telling his guests: "I've got a 6-year-old grand-daughter. I'm going home to talk to her. She doesn't even know we played a football game today."

IT'S WADE'S DUKE team that Navy would like to wallop tomorrow. Duke was one of the clubs that handed Navy its eighth straight defeats last season. It's now 10 in a row for the midshipmen, who took beatings from California and Columbia this year. They're pining for a win over somebody, and Duke offers the earliest opportunity.

Beating Duke could be a rough assignment though, says Hamilton. "In any season, they don't come much better than Duke defensively," he said. "They licked us last year when George Clark in their backfield looked like the best football player in the United States. I understand now that he's not even playing as a regular. It's hard to envision what they've go."

Hamilton knows what he has; a team that has never been able to untrack itself, except for the brilliant stand against Army last November 30. This season, he can muster only one good line, a nice pair of ends, and nothing thus far in the form of a passing attack. Bill Hawkins has been comprising the Navy backfield to date.

THERE'S ONE consolation for Navy, however. Duke isn't going to show them any better backs than Gene Rossides and Lou Kisserow, the Columbia backs who raised hob with Navy last week. That game, incidentally, revealed Navy's Bill Hawkins in a new role—that of speedster. He broke outside Columbia's tackle and actually outran Kusserow in a sprint for a touchdown.

"We didn't know Hawkins was that fast," said Hamilton. "Maybe some of our other kids will show us something Saturday. It's time for Reaves Baysinger to his his stride, and I hope Saturday is the day. Baysinger in form could make a bigger difference than any man on our club."

That's been Navy's saddest chapter to date this season—Baysinger's ineffectiveness. Late last season, he was a hot article with his passes and direction of the Navy T-formation. This year he has been over-shooting his pass receivers and contributing to the raggedness of Navy's attack. It's on the day Baysinger catches fire again that Navy thinks it will win a football game.

ORDINARILY, NAVY would take comfort from the fact that Wade's Duke teams are traditionally single-wing power outfits with little emphasis on passing. In beating Tennessee last week, the Dukes passed only five times but Navy scouts brought back the dismaying report that Duke completed four of those five passes.

Navy will be running into Duke's typically good defenses. Both of Duke's opponents to date, North Carolina State and Tennessee couldn't aggregate 100 yards rushing from scrimmage. Tennessee was held to a net of 26 yards rushing by the Duke line that features the pair of 210-pound tackles, Lew Allen and Lloyd Eisenberg.

But Navy doesn't think it's going to be outplayed at tackle. Dick Shimshak, say the Navy coaches, is an All-America with his running mate, Newbold Smith, not far behind. Duke knows about 'em. They sent Scout Jack Hennimire to Berkeley to watch Navy play California. Duke could be taken—but not by surprise.

Hoyas Upset By St. Louis Eleven, 16-0

BULLETIN

Georgetown lost to St. Louis University, 16-0, last night at Griffith Stadium.

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

After three quarters of ragged play, Georgetown University gridmen were taking a 16-0 beating by St. Louis University last night before a crowd of 10,000 at Griffith Stadium.

Favored by 14 points over the team which had lost two of its three starts to date, the Hoyas were dull, facing their second loss of the season. They were nosed out by Wake Forest in their opener before trimming Fordham easily.

St. Louis pushed over a first-period touchdown after a 65-yard march, added a safety in the second frame and clicked again for a touchdown early in the third quarter on a 38-yard run with a blocked punt.

FIRST PERIOD

A 15-yard penalty for roughing put the Hoyas in trouble early in the period. Raba kicked out to the St. Louis 35 and the Billikens started a scoring march. Three passes by Rooney, for 13, 14 and 13 yards, together with Shea's center plunge for 6 yards, accounted for first downs to the Georgetown 9. On first down Rooney hurled to Sortal who took the ball on the dead run into the end zone. Shea's placement made it 7-0 for the Billikens at 8:50. Georgetown was backed up to its goal seconds later when a clipping penalty pushed it back to the 2-yard marker, but on two punts Surman had St. Louis on its own 26.

SECOND PERIOD

Lee Alberts moved a Surman kick to midfield, and Astroth tossed to Sortal for 20 yards to the Georgetown 21. Set back by a 15-yard penalty, St. Louis kicked over the goal. Georgetown was offside on the first play from the 20 and on the next Georgetown's center, Vic Banonia, heaved the ball over Raba's head and beyond the end zone for an automatic safety. St. Louis' 9-0 lead stood at half time as Georgetown could advance no further than its own 30.

Third Period

Georgetown moved tto the St. Louis 42 with the second half kickoff but a bad centerpass from Kelly dropped it back to the Georgetown 46 where Surman attempted to kick. His punt was blocked by Otto, Billiken tackle, who picked up the ball and ran 38 yards for a touchdown. Shea again converted and it was 16-0 for the invaders.

Gambino Scores Two Touchdowns

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The University of Maryland kept its unbeaten, untied record clean, defeating Richmond, 18 to 6, at College Park last night for its third straight victory.

Sophomore Lucian Gambino, the Terps' high-scoring halfback, paced the Terps with two touchdowns to bring his total to eight in three games. He also passed to End George Simler for the third Terp tally.

The Spiders made their only score in the third period when Halfback Walter Bolen returned a kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown.

A crowd of 12,000 saw the Southern Conference battle.

FIRST QUARTER

Capitalizing on the second of two fumbles, the Richmond team drove down to the 2-yard line where they fumbled and the Terps recovered.

Gambino set up the Richmond advance by bobbling on the 26-yard line. The Spiders, with Ralston and Wilbourne banging the tackles, advanced to the 2 where Ralston fumbled and Kinney recovered for the Terps.

Starting from the 2, the terps advanced to the 27 with a Turyn to Simler pass gaining 13 yards. On the next play, Werner raced 53 yards for a score, but it was called back and the play nullified as the Terps were called for clipping and the Spiders offside. Three plays later the quarter ended with the score Maryland, 0; Richmond, 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Vic Turyn, replacing freshman Quarterback Joe Tucker, intercepted a Richmond pass on the Maryland 26-yard line and returned 26 yards to the Terp 48.

Halfback Hubie Werner darted off tackle for 42 yards before being knocked out on the Spider 6. There tragedy struck the Terps again as Turyn fumbled for a four-yard loss. Then Turyn, trying to lateral to Bonk, handed the ball to Rosser of Richmond instead on the 12 and the Terp advance was halted at that point.

Later Maryland gained possession on its own 34 when Tucker hauled in a Ralston pass. Idzik lost five on the first play, but dashed around end to the 39 on the next play. Then Gambino, on a handoff from Tucker, shot over tackle and raced 61 yards for a score. It was his seventh touchdown in two games.

The Spiders threw a scare into the Terps when Bolen returned Schwartz's kickoff 53 yards to the Maryland 34, where Rowden grabbed him. Kinney intercepted Bolen's pass on the Terp 25 just as the half ended. Score: Maryland, 6; Richmond, 0.

THIRD QUARTER

After a Maryland attack bogged down on the Richmond 20, the Terps set up another score when Hubie Werner returned a Richmond punt 44 yards to the Richmond 18-yard line. Vic Turyn lateraled to Gambino, who passed to End George Simler in the end zone for a touchdown. Once again Schwarz missed the try for the extra point and Maryland led, 12 to 0.

But the Spiders weren't out of it. Schwarz kicked off for the Terps. Little Walter Bolen grabbed the ball on the Richmond 15 and raced 85 yards for a touchdown, cutting back twice to elude Terp tacklers. Thompson's kick was low and Maryland led, 12 to 6.

FOURTH QUARTER

On the second play of the period, Idzik passed to Evans on the Richmond 27 and the latter ran to the Spider 5. Gambino ploughed over tackle for the score and for the third straight time Schwarz's kick failed. Maryland 18, Richmond 6.

Navy Hoping To End Losses Against Duke

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10 (AP).—Still grasping for victory— pleasure not enjoyed around here since September 28 a year ago—Navy bumps into a high-riding Duke football team in Baltimore tomorrow, and despite it all, the Tars are "far from downhearted."

Coach Tom Hamilton spoke these words emphatically today as he walked onto an academy practice field to put his squad through a last, brisk workout.

"Nobody in the country—very few, at least—will come through this season undefeated. We've taken our beating early. We're going to be in there firing with both barrels."

That aggravating string of defeats, which reached 10 games against Columbia last Saturday, "can't go on forever," the big Navy mentor added. And this "may be the one."

35,000 Expected

The Navy athletic office forecast a turnout of about 35,000 in Baltimore Stadium to witness the ninth game in the Duke-Navy series. Navy has won six previous engagements, but Duke handed the Sailors a 21-6 jostling last year.

To combat a Duke team which has about a 10-pound average weight edge in its array of veterans, Navy will be at top strength except at right halfback.

Al McCully, injured in practice just before the Columbia game, definitely will not start, Hamilton announced, and whether he will play at all is questionable. Bob Schwoeffermann will be in his place.

Pete Williams, another back who has been slowed up by injuries, is in good shape and is counted upon to share much of the rushing burden with Fullback Bill Hawkins.

Hurt in preseason practice, Williams saw little action against California two weeks ago and was banged up again in the Columbia tilt. Reserve Tackle Ken Schiweck is back in form, too, and will be on call.

Line Battle Seen

The strength of both lines indicates a battle. Duke allowed North Carolina State and Tennessee only meager gain in winning its first two contests.

To grind away at Navy's defense, Coach Wallace Wade's Blue Devils have Buddy Mulligan, Paul Stephanz and Fred Folger teamed with Quarterback Johnny Montgomery in the single wing.

Bowers Victor On 23d Hole

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Bobby Bowers of Indian Spring won the Middle Atlantic PGA's annual assistant professionals' golf tournament today, defeating the defending champion, Bob Hopkins of Burning Tree, on the fifth extra hole of a playoff match.

Bowers and Hopkins led the field for the first round and tied with scores of 143, 3 under par, for the 6624-yard course at Woodholme. Bowers shot 73-70, and Hopkins had 70-73.

Rich McHale, Chevy Chase, was third with 75 and 71 for 146, and Larry Bradley of Five Farms carded 148 for fourth.

Bowers and Hopkins were par for the first four holes of their playoff, but Bowers won the fifth hole, a 197-yard par-3, with a par, and Hopkins went one over.

W-L Loses, 13-0, To Woodberry Forest

Woodberry Forest, Va., Oct. 10. Substitute Halfback Barney Fields raced 60 yards on a punt return early in the first period to put Woodberry Forest out in front permanently as they defeated Washington-Lee High, 13-0, here yesterday afternoon.

Right Halfback Jim Reuning accounted for the victor's second tally when he dashed 53 yards around end on the second play of the third quarter. The lone extra point was kicked from placement by Calvin Earley.

Eastern Bows, 20-6, Keith Stars; Western Beaten, 19-0, by Trainers

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

With Cecil Gray, Jim McCauley and John Passas crossing the goal line in the first 17 minutes, McKinley Tech's Trainers scored their third straight Interhigh victory, 19-0, over an outmanned Western squad before 2000 spectators yesterday at Western Stadium.

The 19 points tallied by the Trainers made their offensive efforts for the Interhigh season soar to 69, while their goal is uncrossed.

Tech Acts Quickly

Tech scored in 12 plays following Western's kickoff. Gray and Bugs Thompson alternated in running up four first downs before Gray plunged over from the 2. Herb Augst's point try was blocked.

Two minutes later the Trainers scored again. Thompson ran back a Western punt to the Red Raider 37 and on the next play Milt Weinstein pegged a 30-yard pass to Jim McCauley who took the ball on the 7 and racedinto the end zone. Augst's placement was good.

Passas Goes Over

Western couldn't gain after the Tech kickoff and when Wacker got off a short punt to his own 32, Passas and Weinstein carried to the 2 in three plays from where Passas slammed it over. The kick for point was wide.

Coach Ed Solomon of Tech substituted freely for the remainder of the contest. Western paced by Don Strain, Norm Wacker and Dale Summedbet threatened twice in the second half, reaching the Tech 32 in the third quarter and the Trainer 20 in the final period. The big Tech line stopped both drives and the game ended with Tech threatening to score again.

Anacostia Wins Over Roosevelt, 7-6

Anacostia's Indians, fresh from a 6-0 upset victory over Gonzaga last week, continued their winning ways beating the Roosevelt Rough Riders 13-0, yesterday at Anacostia.

The Indians were sparked by Chow Echaves and Bob Mitchell.

Anacostia started on the way to its first score in the initial period when Mitchell intercepted a Roosevelt pass and returned it to the Roosevelt 7. Mitchell then shot an aerial to end Jim Faulkner, who was tackled on the 1-yard line. Echaves plunged over on the next play. Echaves went through tackle for the conversion.

On the last play of the first quarter a 5-yard Roosevelt punt put Anacostion in position for second next score.

Bernie Mead, punting from his own 36, got off a very poor kick and Anacostia took over on the Rider 41. Two plays later, Echaves broke lose for 25 yards and a first down on the Roosevelt 16. Four line plunges, twa apiece by Mitchell and Echaves, put the ball on the two, from where Mitchell scored two plays later.

Haight Makes a Discovery: Calories in Goose Feathers

For Men Only

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

I WAS DISCUSSING my "For Men Only" diet with the family.

"I don't believe I'm going to lose an ounce. I am getting disgusted," I said.

"You must remember," said Mom, "giant oaks from little acorns grow."

"Yes," I snapped, "but did you ever hear of a giant oak shrinking back to an acorn?"

"No," piped up our darling daughter, "but a toy balloon will deflate if you stick a pin in it."

"That's true," Mom countered, "but we were talking about trees. No one expects an oak to revert to an acorn. But it does shed its leaves and in winter the sap goes down."

* * * *

"THAT'S A LAUGH," giggled our star boarder, looking my way. "Maybe if he gets a hair cut he will weigh less. That's like a tree losing its leaves, isn't it?"

I was waiting for somebody to come to my rescue but our darling daughter ended the tree comparison by asking, "Do you think the sap will ever run out of pop's head?"

So instead of chewing the rag, I went to bed.

I dreamed of 2-inch steaks, mashed potatoes and cream puffs—and I awoke and discovered that I was chewing my pillow.

I wonder how many calories are in a mouthful of goose feathers.

DEAR FOLKS:

Big time at Laurel on the weekend program. A field of seven well-matched 3-year-olds will battle it out in the Maryland Handicap at a mile and a quarter. There's $15,000 in added money at stake. Walter M. Jeffords' Loyal Legion carries top weight of 114 pounds and will draw plenty of play. The $2 boys, however, are likely to string along with Ocean Front, twice a winner at the meeting. The card has accent on distance. Five of the eight races are over a route longer than a mile.

The Chick Lang, jrs., have a new son. Papa is the agent for Jock Red Howell. Jockey Sammy Palumbo celebrated his thirty-eighth birthday this week. Sammy has been riding since 1927, when he brought his first winner home—Out Step. He has won 77 races this year. He makes his home in Charles Town with his wife and three children. Jockey Doug Dodson resumed riding after being suspended in New York while aboard Bewitched. Horses are being shipped in from Garden State, which closes with the weekend program. See you on the rail—BILL.

Soggy Field May Favor Generals

Post Reporter

Lexington, Va., Oct. 10.—After a six-year lapse, George Washington of Washington, D. C., and Washington and Lee resume their football rivalry here tomorrow with the game rated a toss-up.

The Generals, defeated only by West Virginia in their three starts, will be seeking their second Southern Conference victory while the invading Colonials will be trying to break into the win column for the first time.

The Washingtonians were laced by Virginia, 33-13, in their opener, and lost to V.M.I., 13-7, last Saturday.

Under normal conditions, Coach Art Lewis' Generals would rate the favorite's role, but heavy rains for the past three days have soaked the gridiron and Lewis' T formation unit will be operating against a distinct disadvantage against the heavier visitors.

If the footing is too heavy for Halfback Jim Kline to strut his stuff, the Colonials will undoubtedly call on Fullback Bill Spangler to shoulder their offensive burden. Charlie Butler is the passing threat with end Dick Koester a fine receiver, on the other end of the G.W. pitching battery.

The Generals will start five freshmen against the Colonials. Also in the starting array will be Halfback Brian Bell, of Washington, former Western High star.

The probable lineups:

George Washington		Wash. & Lee
Koster	L.E.	Lukens
Butkas	L.T.	Smith
Howell	L.G.	Ciancutti

Pays $35 Mutuel

Shivaree Walkaway Victor In Bolling Purse at Laurel

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 10.—The combination of Jockey Skeets Holland, popular veteran Negro rider, and Shivaree, a dark brown colt, fairly flew around this track this afternoon to win the Bolling Field Purse, top even on the Friday program.

It was to the tune of a $35 win mutuel that Shivaree won with daylight to spare over the Nydrie Stables' High Fortidies and Mrs. M. Woods' Eved Message in a field of eight.

In the colors of Miss Margie Fisher, Shivaree made every post a winning one and hung up time of 1:46 for the mile and a sixteenth, contested over a fast track and under cloudy skies.

The victory was the first for the Shivaree-Holland duo since the day of the International Gold Cup race last June when it took the eighth race.

There was no catching the pair today. Holland sprinted Shivaree into command going to the club house turn. High Fortidies, Let's Dance and Billy Bumps were closest at this stage.

Shivaree hugged the rail and kept right along. High Fortidies finally weakened, Eb and Dog O'Sullivan, made a brief move but the others failed to raly.

The winner was a tired horse at the finish.

Third money went to C. Hatch's

Padgett Saddles Winner

Twenty Thirty in the field of seven over the mile and 70 yards course.

The winner, clocked in 1:43 1/5, paid $9.

Don Padgett, leading rider at the meeting, had a hand in the production of a $191.20 payoff on the daily double combination of 12 and 6.

Padgett put the finishing touches on the transaction by boting the Bobanet Stable's Punxsy home ahead of E. C. Duebler's John Cheleden and King Ranch's Willing Hand. Punxsy paid $6.80.

The big price was set when Mrs. R. E. Benton's She's Back won the first race at a $43 mutuel. Jockey Mike Basile brought the 3-year-old filly along to turn back, among others, E. D. Talbert's Regularity and W. I. Jones' Fighting Flag.

Crimson Makes First Trip to Dixie

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 10.—Harvard crosses the Mason-Dixon Line for the first time in its football history tomorrow, and if its inaugral is spoiled by a Virginia victory here it will be quite all right with the Cavaliers.

A capacity crowd of more than 25,000 will witness the ninth battle between the two with the Cavaliers, unbeaten and untied in two games, seeking its first victory over the Crimson, which also sports a perfect rtcord in its two outings this year.

Virginia High Scorer

While Harvard was bumping Western Maryland, 52 to 0, and squeezing by Boston U., 19 to 14, the Cavaliers were having a field day against George Washington, 33 to 13, and VPI, 41 to 7.

Fullbacks Grover Jones and Johnny Papit, the sensational freshman, and Halfbacks Bruce Bailey and George Grimes have powered the Cavalier attack in their first two games and Coach Art Guepe is counting on them to carry the load again.

Harvard Hit by Hurts

Harvard will not be at full strength. Two of its better linemen, Tackles Nick Rodis and Joe Deravis, were banged up last week and will see little action, if any.

Coach Dick Harlow will rely on his quarterback and best passer, Kenny O'Donnell, to spearhead his offense with Halfback Chip Cannon and Fullback Vince Moravec, a 210-pound line-buster lending helping hands.

The probable lineups:

Harvard		Virginia

Houston	L.T.	Kirkland
Drennan	L.G.	Thomas

Catholic U. Has Fair Chance Against Terrors in Grid Debut

Westminster, Md., Oct. 10.—Catholic University's football forces, idle since 1940, return to action here tomorrow when they tangle with Western Maryland's Green Terrors in a Mason-Dixon Conference game at 2:15 p. m.

The Cardinals will unveil a team of newcomers to college football. Even Coach Gene Augusterfer is getting his first crack at masterminding a collegiate eleven, though he played a lot of football for C. U. back in the early 1930s.

Augusterfer will institute the T-formation with his small speedy backfield that will operate behind a line that averages under 190 pounds.

Chances that C. U. will return to the wars with a victory are fair. In two games, the Terrors have yet to score. Harvard beat them, 52-0, and Gettysburg, 6-0.

The Western Maryland line has the weight edge on the Cardinals, averaging 200 pounds per man. The Terrors resumed their postwar football program last year, winning five and losing two, and with several veterans back, also have the edge in experience.

The hosts, who use the wing, will lead with their two outstanding backfield threats, Joe Giannelli, a slippery breakaway runner, and Hank Corrado, a big line plunger.

C. U. will depend on Charles (Hurry-up) Holl for the long end sweeps, and George Rhodes on the line crashing. Reserve Joe Mauiri will handle the punting.

Probable starting lineups:

Warrenton Beats Marshall, 13 to 7

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 10.—Quarterback Paul Lunsford tossed two touchdown pases to End Ev McClanahan to lead Warrenton to a 13-7 victory over Marshall at Warrenton, Va., today. Both were 15-yard pitches into the end zone.

The losers' only tally came when Halfback Sam Craum snagged a 10-yard toss from Quarterbock Moe Brown.

Doesn't Show But—

Army Team Worried Over Illini Game

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Unbeaten in 30 football games over a four season span, Army's underdog Cadets raced through a brief workout at Yankee Stadium today warwhooping like comanches in their final drill before hte game with Illinois.

Nervous? They didn't lok it. Anything but. But one of the insiders knew.

"They're worried all right," grunted line coach Herman Hickman, a jovial giant out of Tennessee who has been at the side of head Coach Earl (Red) Blaik all through the dizzy streak that began in 1944.

"That's the way a nervous team acts on Friday nights. Maybe they feel a little bit like the ignorant fighter who boasts he's never been licked. Somebody gets him sooner or later."

Blaik agreed Army's chain of successes, broken only by a coreless tie with mighty Notre Dame at Yankee Stadium last fall, stood perilously near its end.

* * * *

"IN A WORD, I'm apprehensive," said the football master of the Kaydets. Usually his word is "optimistic"—and in the past he could be when Glenn Davis, Doc Blanchard, Arnold Tucker and a host of husky, polished linemen were around.

"This will be the sternest test for a good many reasons," Blaik said. "One of them, naturally, is that this is an inexperienced team."

"And look how little," moaned Hickman. "It's the littlest team in football. Those pore boys are downright fragile!"

For the Army, it is small, avering 188 pounds. But Illinois, champion of the rough and rugged Big Nine and winner in the Rose Bowl, averages 189.

THEN RAY ELIOT of Illinois appeared with his squad and if he never wins another championship he can look back with joy on one he won today. His crying-towel act was the best—or worst—exhibition of its kind seen around here since Rutgers and Princeton played the first intercollegiate football game 78 years ago.

"All I've got is country boys," he moaned. "I don't think a one of them has been in New York before. And Army? Sure they're in awe of Army. Who wouldn't be against a tea mthat hasn't been licked in 30 games?

"They lost Davis and Blanchard and Tucker. We lost Buddy Young, Alex Agase and Julie Ryokovich. We're better than we were at this time last year, but not up to our Rose Bowl form. Not by a long shot."

From the sound of all that, it's an odds on bet that neither Illinois nor Army shows up tomorrow. And with 70,000 tickets sold, too.

Leesburg Wins, 6-0, Over Lincoln High

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 10.—The Leesburg High School football team defeated Lincoln 6-0 in a hard fought game today. The only score was made in the final three minutes of the game. Roger Elgin threw a long pass to Bob Rutherford for the touchdown.

Sutton Gets Three Terms In Prison In Gun Case

Maximum Penalty Of One Year And $500 Fine Given to Pittman

Gun-toting in the District can be a bad thing and using the gun is even worse, but the law really gets worked up if the weapon has been stolen.

These facts were forcefully impressed on 28-year-old Raymond E. Sutton, 1636 Gales st. ne., who made the final mistake of leaving the gun, heavy with fingerprints, where police could find it for evidence.

District Court Justice Edward M. Curran gave Sutton:

Five to 15 years for the housebreaking during which he stole the gun from Boxer Aaron Perry.

Three to nine years for shooting a cab driver.

Maximum Penalty

In a second case yesterday, the new law's maximum penalty was imposed as Municipal Court Judge George Neilson sentenced Walter Pittman, 21-year-old Virginia road gang fugitive, to one year and fined him $500. Nonpayment of the fine will keep him in prison another year.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett commended action of the judges; expressed the hope other jurists would follow suit.

Sutton was charged with the wounding of Cab Driver John R. Gladden, 44, of 1014 65th pl. ne., the night of March 16 near 16th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Still hanging over him is a trial for the wounding of Policeman Pvt. Raymond D. Padgett, 54, who was shot four times attempting to arrest him in the taxi incident. Sutton withdrew a plea of guilty in the shooting.

Lost An Eye

Padgett, who lives at 5237 N. Carlin Spring rd., Arlington, Va., lost an eye as a result of the shooting and has never returned to duty.

Sutton, who said after his arrest that he was panic-stricken when he shot Padgett in fear of being returned to complete his prison sentence, fled the scene and hid the gun in a waste basket where police found it.

Pittman was arrested September 25 by Policeman Albert G. Fielder, who found him prowling around cars in the 1000 block of 13th st. nw. A search at the 1st Precinct station revealed a .38 caliber revolver in his pocket. H will be returned to Richmond, Va., to serve out a three-year term for grand larceny before serving the weapons charge sentence here.

China Reports Heavy Loss by Communists

Nanking, Oct. 10 (AP).—The Chinese defense ministry announced today that its small navy had smashed a number of Communist artillery batteries and inflicted heavy casualties on enemy forces attempting to take Yingkow, south Manchurian seaport.

The Communists were reported yesterday to have broken into Yingkow, an important link in the government's tenuous supply routes to Manchuria. Its status today was not clearly defined, but the ministry's report indicated the port was still in government hands despite hot assault.

A military spokesman said the fighting elsewhere in Manchuria was inconclusive but that the situation was tense at Szepingkai and Tiehling, railway centers between Mukden and Changchun.

The spokesman said that in central China the forces of the daring Communist raider Liu Po-Cheng had been cut into several small groups and prevented from reaching the Yangtze River near Hankow.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, addressing his national government leaders on this thirty-sixth anniversary of the Chinese Republic, declared that with full cooperation his government would have enough power to crush the Communists.

Bodies of Ten Recovered in Chicago Fire

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Ten burned bodies were recovered today from a 22-flat tenement building on the near northwest side after fire raged through the structure last night.

Authorities sought to determine whether the blaze which killed five women and five children, and injured a dozen other residents of the four-story brick building, was started by a fire-bug.

William Corruthers, 42, the janitor, told of seeing the flames "whoosh" up the stair well, and a blackened coffee can with a strong kerosene odor was found near the foot of the stairs.

The dead women and children perished on the two top floors of the building. Most of those injured jumped from windows of their flats as flames roared into their rooms.

Two Get $569 In Holdup of D. C. Junkshop

Jewelry and Coins Reported Stolen In Other Cases

Two men got $569 yesterday in a late afternoon holdup and robbery of a junk shop at 1117 Q st. nw.

Harold S. Garner, proprietor, told police the holdup men accosted him in the rear of the place about 5:45 p. m. One of them, armed with a revolver, ordered him into the office, where Garner's brother Raymond, was working. There, the pair lifted two bags containing $550 from the cash drawer, then took $18 from Harold and $1 from Raymond.

The robbers, both Negroes, escaped on foot. The armed one was described as about 22 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds and wearing a brown hat and Army sweater. No description was given for the other.

Jewelry Stolen

Other thefts reported yesterday included loss of $490 worth of jewelry and two coin collections totaling $220.

The commissioners also moved yesterday to seek State funds for the improvement of four roads within the county by asking T. Howard Duckett, member of a State roads committee, to present the requests to highway officials.

Improvements sought by the county include widening and improving of the Southern Maryland Pike; improvement of the Marlboro Pike; widening of Queens Chapel rd., and extension of Rhode Island ave. from Hyattsville to Beltsville.

Test Case

Ruling Due On BB Gun As Weapon

The owners of a Southeast hardware store weer charged with selling a "deadly and dangerous weapon"—a BB gun—without a license in a test case heard in Municipal Court yesterday.

Irving Abraham and Isadore Schwartz, both 27, coowners of the Hillcrest Hardware Store at 3810 Alabama ave. se., sold a Daisy BB gun to Robert Lee, 14, son of Adelbert W. Lee, school board member, of 3195 Westover dr. se., on September 28, according to testimony.

Schwartz and Abraham, arrested by Sergt. Robert J. Tompkins of the Eleventh Precinct, admitted they had no license to sell the weapon.

All Sell It, Court Told

Their counsel, Irving Yochelson, told Judge Armond Scott that "every hardware store in town sells BB guns without a license, they're just making a guinea pig out of my client."

License Inspector Harry Galer maintained from the stand that his office considers this type gun a dangerous weapon.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Kneipp pointed out two police regulations, one that no minor can carry an air rifle or air gun and other that air rifles cannot be discharged in the District without a license.

C. Francis Kennedy, president of the Washington Hardware Association with 75 members representing 113 stores, testified for the defense that "my guess is that of this membership about 90 per cent sell BB guns, and to my knowledge none have license.

Had No Complaints

"One store has been selling them 11 years and there have been no police complaints," Kennedy said. He described the Daisy as a toy, as opposed to some other types that can be pumped up to secure a high pressure.

Judge Scott said it had not been shown that the gun was a deadly weapon and continued the case until October 24, pending a test by Inspector John Fowler, police ballistics expert, as to the dangerousness of the BB gun.

Va. Bus Fare Increase Is Postponed

Effective date of authorized fare increases on the Arnold-operated bus lines yesterday was postponed until October 21 by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The increases, ranging from 5 to 10 cents, were to have gone into effect Sunday.

The commission last week authorized the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. to increase fares between Washington and Arlington and Fairfax Counties.

Petitions Bring Action

Its postponement action yesterday came as a result of petitions submitted by the Arlington Civic Federation, the Arlington Public Utilities Commission and the Arlington Bus Riders Association.

Th commission also announced it will investigate the joint rate charged for low-fare transfers now in use by Capital Tranist and two Virgina bus lines—Arnold and the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Tranist Co.

Refusing to terminate the low-fare transfer arrangement for travel between Washington and nearby military installations, the commission said it also will look into division of revenues under the combination business.

Asked End of Transfers

The Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Company and the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Company had requested discontinuance of the transfer privilege between Capital Transit and their buses. Capital Transit joined in the petition after a previous effort to end the transfer system in an independent action.

When the Commission refused Capital's case, the company filed suit in District Court to compel cancellation of the transfer system. The action still is pending.

Public hearings on the transfer rate investigation will be held soon. The rate allows 12 one-way trips for $1.60 or 13½ cents per trip.

Pearl Works Will Reopen Under Deputies' Protection

however, said workers started at 30 to 35 cents an hour and received a top of 65 cents an hour.

Only comment available from the Excelsior Co. was a front page advertisement in the county weekly, which stated that "the strike is illegal and all persons participating in it have forfeited their jobs . . ."

The mayor also charged that the strike was illegal, on the grounds that the pickets were brought in from Federalsburg. The union admitted most of the pickets were from Federalsburg, but said this was necessary because of fear of reprisals against home town pickets.

"This strike is legal and they know it," union representatives said.

Two Arrested

Near violence broke out yesterday, according to the mayor and the etown bailiff, James B. Fluharty, when strikers cut off the current for the button-making machines three times. This action, together with "beer drinking" and a speech by a union official—"John L. the Second," the bailiff identified him—aroused the townspeople, the local officials charged.

Irvin Jaffe, a union organizer, and Lawrence Christopher, Federalsburg striker, were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. Today their cases were continued on bond of $500 each. Bailiff Fluharty said he arrested Jaffe after ordering the latter to halt the "beer drinking" by the pickets.

Union Representative Tillman admitted workers had thrown the switch yesterday. He charged that Jaffe was sittin gin his car when arrested, and that the two orrested union men were victims of "prejudice" in that bond was set for $500 for an offense usually calling for a bond of $50.

Action broke loose Tuesday when ILGWU organizers told workers to leave the plants here and in Federalsburg, Mayor Sutton said. He charged that workers entered the gray frame barn here three times to cut the current operating button-making machines.

The town bailiff, James B. Fluharty, who also acts as chief of police, said this roused the townspeople, but that additional hostility was aroused when a crowd of striking workers gathered outside the building "drinking beer" and listening to a speech by a union official, whom he described as "John L. the Second." "He's from New York," he added.

D. C. Police Are Flayed In Church Burglaries

Mt. Vernon Place Pastor Deplores 'Inefficiency' After Six Entries

A Washington minister yesterday lambasted the Metropolitan Police force as "absolutely inefficient" in the wake of six "unsolved" burglaries at his church within 10 months.

Contending that the situation has now become "desperate," Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, declared:

"The police come out here, walk around and look like they're interested and that's the last we hear about them. So far as we can tell, they haven't gotton a clew or anything else."

In the past few months numerous Washington churches have fallen prey to burglars, police records show. By late August the situation had become so severe that a special squad of detectives was assigned to combat the thefts. Every section but the Southwest area was affected, and precinct commanders asked all scout car and patrolmen to pay special attention to churches on their beats.

Damage Worse Than Loss

Latest in the series of housebreakings was staged after 3 a. m. yesterday, according to police investigators. Dr. Rustin said. He reported only $29 in cash was stolen but the "damage was ten times worse."

A check of the premises, located at 9th and Massachusetts ave. nw., revealed that at least seven glass doors, one of them "burglarproof," were smashed by the intruders and several locks were tampered with. More than a dozen desks were pried open, apparently with a crowbar, and ransacked. Drawers and closets in many first and second story rooms were searched, including the girls' choir room, the church office, financial secretary's office, library, social welfare department and kitchen.

"I am so disgusted it makes me sick," Dr. Rustin said, following a partial tour of the 76-room structure. "It's not our desire to go over the heads of the police," he added, "but frankly we're sunk."

Insurance Canceled

One of the worst aspects of the housebreaking sprees, he pointed out, is that the "insurance company has canceled their policy."

The following record of burglaries at the church, visited by at least 500 people weekly in addition to those attending regular services, was given:

December 22, 1946, an RCA radio and record player combination stolen; March 29, 1947, three lamps and a sterling silver baptismal dish stolen; April 26, four lamps stolen; June 16, three electric fans stolen; August 23, $50 in cash stolen and four doors smashed; October 10, $29 in cash taken, 11 doors cracked, drawers rifled, etc.

Capt. Clyde Strange of the Second Precinct, where the church is located, attributed the housebreakings to "kids" in the neighborhood. He said police had found the "church open five or six times and haven't gotten anyone to close it." Two investigators have been assigned to the case, he added.

Capt. Robert G. Bryant, acting chief of detectives, declined to comment on Dr. Rustin's charges. Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett could not be reached for comment.

$5000 to $8000 Damage Done at District Plant

Between five and eight thousand dollars in property was damaged or destroyed Thursday night at the National Engineering and Metals Co., it was reported to police yesterday.

Sergt. Frank E. Dodson of the general assignment squad said that some employes of the company had not been paid recently. He declined to say whether he thought there was a connection between the two incidents.

According to police, the plant, located at 1215 Kenilworth ave. ne., was entered by breaking a side window on the first floor. The door of the safe was torn off, but nothing important taken, according to Jackson K. Lightfoot, vice president of the company. Upholstery on six chairs was slashed, and paint had been poured on four air conditioning units and one typewriter.

Lightfoot, who said he had no idea who did it, stated that only a small amount of merchandise had been taken from a bonded warehouse there.

Carroll Morgan's Dance Celebrates Anniversary

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. Carroll Morgan, who'll have been married 25 years on Tuesday, October 21, celebrated it ahead of time this year at the dance they gave last evening at their home in Chevy Chase.

The 200 or more guests were strictly old friends of the hosts, who both grew up in Washington, were married here and have since called Washington "home." The handful of young people were friends of the Morgans' sons, Charles Carroll Morgan, jr., and Leroy.

There were shoals of dinner parties beforehand with Mr. and Mrs. Morgan guests of honor of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lowndes Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chappell who entertained together at the Chevy Chase Club. Also having dinner parties were Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Scott, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward Foley, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Maj. Fred Roy, Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter.

New Yorkers Attend

Guests here from out-of-town for the fete were included at the Chappell-Jackson party given at the Chevy Chase Club. In the group were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hollyday of Bedford, N. Y., she's the former Minna Blair of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clarke of Katonah, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. James Mitchell of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred duPont, and Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Copeland of Wilmington, Del.

Mrs. Morgan's brother-in-law, Streeter Flynn of Oklahoma, who came East on business in New York, took time out to come down for the event, and Mr. Morgan's brother-in-law, Col. Maurice Fitzmaurice Day, former Military Attache of the British Embassy, is also here. Another member of the family at the party was Mr. Morgan's brother, Edwin Morgan of Baltimore.

Dining with Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Scott were Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Chauncey Parker, Col. and Mrs. David Barry, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Newbold, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, and Thomas Waterman.

Foleys Entertain

Foley for dinner were Clark Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Carusi, Dr. and Mrs. Lauriston Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Tinsley Garnett, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. James Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hurling, Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bell, Garcia Arias, John Hanes, Blair Childs, Pendleton Hogan and Henry Labouisse.

Sidney played for dancing until supper time—Chez Morgan—and then long after. Out in the garden there was a marquee set up sheltering small tables.

Practically covering the bodice of Mrs. Morgan's bouffant platinum gray gown shot with silver thread was a lei of tiny purple orchids sent by plane from Hawaii and according to island custom was placed over her shoulders by the donors—in this instance, Capt. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray.

Bridge Auxiliary Sponsors Tourney To Aid Hospital

Members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League will compete in the annual charity tournament today at Burlington Hotel, all proceeds going to benefit Children's Hospital. Play begins at 2 p. m., continuing through an evening session, starting time of which will be announced from the floor.

Mrs. Frederick Vosburgh and Mrs. W. H. Gorton are chairmen of the tourney, which is under the direction of Paul E. Golden.

Mrs. Dora Schwartz is donor of the trophy in competition. It was won last year by W. S. Benedict and John Moore, the winners receiving only temporary possession, the real aim being the master point awards from the American Contract Bridge League. The tournament will be run under the rules of this organization, without the earmarks of the usual charity game. Less serious-minded bridge fans, however, can contribute to the fund by playing in a one-round section in the evening, starting about 8 o'clock.

Any contribution will be gratefully accepted by the cochairmen or by Mrs. Roy Hackett, president of the auxiliary. Rising prices have increased the overhead at Children's Hospital; the auxiliary hopes to increase its annual donation proportionately.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I'm calling on you for aid; although this isn't exactly along your line perhaps you will be able to help me. My son will be 4 next month and I am planning his first birthday party. I have absolutely no idea about games for this age group. We live in a second-floor apartment so let that be a determining factor. Also, I want no outside games suggested as I will just assume the weather will be bad and plan accordingly. J. B.

Four-year-olds still do not play well in groups, especially if the children in the group do not know each other well. So, many organized games are out, but here are some suggestions for entertainment. I know one 4-year-old who thinks "Pinning the Tail on the Donkey" as necessary a part of a birthday party as the cake. And they love it! Simple prizes for the successful ones add interest. But if you have prizes, see to it that each child present is a winner some time during the afternoon.

A grab bag with simple favors is fun. Also, musical chairs, if you have the room. Arrange chairs in a circle, one less chair than children. The children walk around the chairs while music is played and when it stops they all attempt to sit down. The one without a chair is out. Remove one chair and repeat until only one child is left.

"Button, Button, Who's Got the Button?" is usually enjoyed by 4-year-olds. Seat them on the floor in a circle and choose a person to be "It." He passes around slipping his hands between those of the children in the circle. Into one pair of hands, he drops the button. When he has passed around the entire circle in this way, all guess who has the button. The one who guesses right is "It" next.

All of these games will be more successful if a mother or two or older brother or sister will play them along with the children. Also, don't play any one game too long.

A short, well-loved story, read aloud with all quiet just before refreshments, sometimes provides a much appreciated rest for children as well as their host's mama. It also slows the tempo of the party before the children eat, which is very much to the good. About a half to three quarters of an hour of entertainment before refreshments is about all that is needed.

Food Saving Menus Use Two-Day Roast and Soup

Weekend menus that help stretch the supply of foods on the conservation list and make the most of those that are plentiful were suggested today by the Citizen Food Committee.

For dinner tonight, they suggest a filling "meal-in-one" dish—French potato soup. It's made with potatoes, onions and milk with pieces of frankfurters floating on top.

To follow the soup, a cabbage, apple, and raisin salad is suggested, and for dessert, hot spicy gingerbread.

For Sunday and Monday, the committee suggests a two-day pot roast. On Sunday, it can be served fresh from the pot with generous amounts of root vegetables cooked along with the meat. The meal can be completed with a crisp salad and either fresh fruit or any of the abundant dried fruits steamed or made into pudding.

Fine pot roast can be made with less tender cuts of meat, the committee pointed out. Their widespread use will lessen demand for higher grade meats requiring grain to fatten the animal.

Monday's shopping will be negligible because the pot roast that is left can be sliced cold and served with the reheated gravy, or made into a meat pie with a potato crust, or into hash, all of them wholesome and well-liked dishes. Any favorite vegetable will be good with these dishes and suggestions for dessert are packaged or gelatin desserts.

FRENCH POTATO SOUP

3 Cups cubed potatoes
½ Cup chopped onion
2 Tablespoons fat
1½ Cups boiling water
4 Cups milk
1½ Teaspoons salt, pepper
4 to 5 frankfurters

Cook the potatoes, onions and fat in the water until potatoes are tender. Add the milk, salt and pepper. Add cut frankfurters, simmer 10 minutes and serve.

It's Not Fair—This Pound Shedding—Joe Doakes' Missus Can't Keep Pace

By Lucia Brown

DOESN'T seem fair, but Joe Doakes can lose weight just as fast as his wife while eating more.

The reason, of course, is that Mr. D. is taller and bigger-boned than the little woman. His body, being larger, burns up more calories than hers. In fact, there's a 300 to 400-calorie difference in their daily food needs, naturally in favor of the head of the house.

All of which adds up to the fact that if the Doakes decide to do their dieting together—with this diet we're running, for instance—she should stop eating about 100 calories before he does at every meal if she wants to lose as much as he loses.

Of course, the Doakes are an exceptional pair—an average-sized American man married to an average-sized American woman. The difference in build between you and your husband may not be much, or it may be more, than for the Doakes.

ACTIVITY enters into the picture, too. Both of the Doakes rate "moderately active." But if your spouse sits at a desk all day, while you chase five kids up and down stairs, scrub on an old-fashioned wash board and repaper the living room—well, you never can tell, you may burn up more calories than he does.

Generally speaking, however, the Doakes' differential can be followed by dieting couples. It won't be too hard to adjust this diet to your own use if you wish. The best way is to leave the portions of fresh fruits, vegetables, protein dishes, and milk as they are, and cut on bread, cereals, potatoes and sugar. Bring your total down to around 1150, compared with his diet of around 1450.

Just a little minor subtraction and you'll make a major addition to the effectiveness of the diet as far as you're concerned, and be able to keep pace with papa as he sheds the pounds.

To Explain Beauty Aids For New Look

HELEN VAN SLYKE

Helen Van Slyke, beauty editor of Glamour magazine, arrived in Washington yesterday and will give a series of lectures Monday and Tuesday at a local store in connection with "Beauty Week."

A native Washingtonian, Mrs. Van Slyke was formerly fashion editor of a newspaper and during the war organized health and beauty clinics for war workers.

In her talks next week she will discuss "New Beauty for the New Look." Six models will appear with her, wearing make-up keyed to new fashion colors. Mrs. Van Slyke will point out types of hair styling for women in age-groups from 16 to 60. She will also describe the new pale shades in cosmetics that are replacing the dark sun-tans of recent years.

"Just as the season's fashions have taken a decided turn," says Mrs. Van Slyke, "so must your beauty and grooming carry out the theme and put the accent on femininity."

Smart Shopping Will Stretch Family Dollar 20 Per Cent

It is possible to save as much as 20 per cent on your daily purchases, provided you know how to shop. So contends Sidney Margolius, author of "How to Buy More for Your Money," which was published this month by Doubleday & Co.

For example, according to Mr. Margolius, one bottle of aspirin may cost as much as 71 cents, but a smart shopper can buy exactly the number of aspirin tablets made to exactly the same formula for as little as 18 cents—if she knows where and how to shop. Identical cans of grapefruit may vary in price from 8 to 13 cents. It's all in knowing how to judge what you are getting for your shopping dollar.

"How to Buy More for Your Money" covers everything from moth flakes to fur coats, and names names and prices in telling you how to make four dollars do the work of five in the shopping that you do every day.

One of the first principles in wise buying, the author says, is to shop the store sales. Nearly every store has sales, some of them frequently, at which real bargains can be found. For instance, "How To Buy More For Your Money" says that a woman who followed sales closely in one typical city during 1947 could have bought an innerspring mattress for $21.97, marked down from $29.50. In another store boys' tee shirts were reduced from $1.39 to 50 cents, and a chenille spread that had been selling for $12 went down to $7.98.

Knowing quality is another key to saving money, Mr. Margolius says.

Give Lucille a Yard...

By Richard L. Coe

THANKS TO THE refreshing impudence of Lucille Ball, we have come to the conclusion that "Lured," at the Capitol, is supposed to be a comedy. At least we found some unexpected laughs in its its aimless mystery antics.

Miss Ball plays a Scotland Yard detective, which is surely something you cannot call type casting. Because her sharp tongue makes so charming an impression in her right cheek, Miss Ball is a consistently agreeable performer to have around.

At times "Lured" seems to be a caricature of itself—one of those foggy London adventures about missing girls, murder in the night and eccentric people. It took us quite a while to decide that it was supposed to be funny. Could be, of course, that we're just being charitable, but the name of the script writer suggests we're on the right track.

He is Leo Rosten, who used to write witty pieces for the New Yorker under the name Leonard Q. Ross. He does seem to have a split personality, for as Rosten he also wrote an almost definitive book on movieland, "Hollywood: The Movie Colony—The Movie Makers." So it's only fair to assume that as the author of this screen play Rosten-Ross is having fun.

Once you get past such an academic point, you probably will be able to relax and take "Lured" for the rambling nonsense that it is. It concerns an American chorus girl who's stranded in a London that exists only in mystery yarns. When a chum is murdered, she's employed by Inspector Charles Coburn of Scotland Yard to act as bait.

"Young Girl Wanted"

Bait for what? Those "personal ads" in the newspapers, of which this country's closest approach seems to be the Saturday Review of Literature columns. You know: "Aged millionaire wants to meet young girl interested in petunias." Or some such thing. This seems to have been driving good, gray Scotland Yard into a polite frenzy.

There's no point going into the things that happen to Lucille once she's joined the force. They're highly unlikely but they're still rather fun if you don't know what's going to happen next. The cast is suavely baffled by whatever they're supposed to be doing and in it you find such accomplished mystery men as Boris Karloff, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, George Zucco, Joseph Calleia, Alan Mowbray and George Sanders, whose attraction for sleek young ladies never fails to astonish us. What's the guy got, anyway?

Also on the Capitol's screen are some swell sports clips, including the World Series windup and some of the razzle-dazzle gains of the grid past in "The Pigskin Parade."

VAUDEVILLE on the Capitol age is representated by the rnaut Brothers, whose bird court-p is still funny enough to make wish there were more good acts the circuit. These chaps don't d to hug a mike with a collec-tic of "As-I-was-coming-over-to-theater" anecdotes that in-vably are tasteless and old. It's a reef to find comedians who are not Broadway hillbillies. The others include Janye Walton, a fairis radio singer from Chicago; Mage d Karr, a dance team, and the Le Hendersen Dancers in two uninspired routines.

"HENRY V" is coming back to these parts for a two-day run at the Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Thursday and Friday, October 30 and 31. As was the policy during the film's record-breaking run at the Little, the film will be shown on a twice daily reserved seat policy. The price scale is $1.20 $1.80 for evening and 90 cents and $1.20 for matinees. Mail orders should be sent to the Hiser, with either checks or money order and a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

"LURED," United Atrists release produced by James Nasser for Hunt-Stromberg. Screenplay by Leo Rosten. Directed by Douglas Sirk. At the Capitol.

A NOVEL REVIVAL is on the books for the Columbia next week, when "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Tobacco Road" form an unlikely duo for opening Thursday. The combination has been tried in other cities and seems to work.

ALSO ON THE future books is "Grand Ole Opry," which will be coming to Constitution Hall for two performances on Friday, October 31. Impresario for this one is radio man Connie B. Gay, who describes himself as "an exponent of American Folk Music." At least some of the stars who do that Saturday night radio show from Nashville will be up, promises Connie.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe meets "The Winslow Boy" as he is off stage.

He's Tame Now

Clarence Morehouse, who was Dick Powell's stand-in on "To the Ends of the Earth," played the title role as a gorilla in "Ingagi" in 1929.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round
Dramatizing of Aid To Europe Suggested

Charles Luckman,
Citizens Food Committee,
The White House.

Dear Mr. Luckman:

Pearson

I hesitate to butt into your business, but since yours is a citizens' food committee, I, as a citizen, take the liberty of making a suggestion regarding your tough job of getting food to Europe.

It seems to me the hardest job we face is making sure this food is genuinely appreciated by the people of Europe as a friendly sacrifice from the people of the United States.

Last year, when we sent food to Europe, several million tons were unloaded efficiently and unostentatiously at the Havre docks—all accepted by most Frenchmen as a matter of course.

Simultaneously, in Marseilles harbor, a cargo of Soviet wheat entered with flags flying, bands playing. There were street parades, a municipal holiday and paeans of praise for the great benefactors of the French people—Soviet Russia. Actually, the Russian cargo of wheat was a mere driblet capable of feeding the French only a week or so. Actually, it was American grain which supported the French people for months. And, contrary to the propaganda generally believed by the French, the Soviet wheat not only was paid for by the French government, but was paid for in hard-to-get dollars, not francs.

Finally, that Russian wheat came direct from the Soviet government—not from the Russian people. Not more than a handful of Russian people even know about it. The American wheat, on the other hand, was saved and collected after a mass campaign by all the American people, in which farmers shipped wheat early and every housewife cut down on her use of bread.

In other words, ours was a genuine gesture of friendship to the people of France and Europe from the people of America, but the people of Europe never fully realized that this was the case.

This time, Communist leaders in France and Italy already are preparing to unload a few cargoes of Russian wheat with great fanfare in order to repeat their successful propaganda of one year ago. They want history to repeat. And if we are not very careful it will.

So my suggestion to the Citizens Food Committee is that this time we take steps to see that the people of Europe evaluate this campaign for exactly what it is—a genuine sacrifice from the heart of America.

To that end I make the further suggestion that we arrange for the collection of this food direct from the heart of America in such a way that it can be visualized and dramatized and that the real story will be told to the millions of people we are trying to help.

Why not dramatize the story of America's sacrifice by running a "Friendship Train" straight across the United States, straight through the heart of America, collecting food as it goes, inspiring the housewives and farmers of the Nation to spare a bag of flour or a bushel of wheat and bring it down to the Friendship Train as their contribution toward friendship with the people of Europe?

I am sure that patriotic Governor Earl Warren would accompany the train through his State to Nevada, and that Governor Pittman would then carry on across Nevada to Utah with other Governors cooperating in their States. I am certain also that every newspaper editor in the cities through which the Friendship Train passes would be eager and anxious to explain its mission. And I know that some of the patriotic actors of Hollywood could and would accompany the train in order to dramatize the story of Europe and the part food can play in building a new Democracy.

Finally I am sure that the original "Friendship Train, starting at Los Angeles with one boxcar to hold the sacks of flour and bags of wheat donated by the people of each city, would add new boxcars at San Francisco, Sacramento, Reno, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Denver and Omaha, until it became a great rolling tribute from the heart of America rumbling across the continent to New York and thence to Europe. This visible gesture of the generosity of America would more than offset the cooked-up fanfare of Communist leaders of Europe and would convince the people of Europe that this food comes not from the United States Government as a part of its foreign policy but is scraped together from every dinner table in America—a sacrifice from the American people to their less-fortunate fellow men.

Getting food to Europe, no matter how it's sent, is important. But how much better that it be received not as barter between governments — a deal whereby the foreign minister of a country pawns his political support to the United States or American in return for a mess of American pottage!

How much more important, if the recipients of this food interpret it not as a cold and calculated move, but rather what it really is—a movement by the American people to stint their own dinner tables to help neighbors in distress who in turn are helped to make democracy live!

Perhaps I'm cockeyed on this, or perhaps you have a better way of getting this idea across. In any event, this is merely a suggestion from one citizen vitally interested in the success of your citizens' food committee.

Sincerely yours,
DREW PEARSON.

Smart Shopping Will Stretch Family Dollar 20 Per Cent

It is possible to save as much as 20 per cent on your daily purchases, provided you know how to shop. So contends Sidney Margolius, author of "How to Buy More for Your Money," which was published this month by Doubleday & Co.

For example, according to Mr. Margolius, one bottle of aspirin may cost as much as 71 cents, but a smart shopper can buy exactly the number of aspirin tablets made to exactly the same formula for as little as 18 cents—if she knows where and how to shop. Identical cans of grapefruit may vary in price from 8 to 13 cents. It's all in knowing how to judge what you are getting for your shopping dollar.

"How to Buy More for Your Money" covers everything from moth flakes to fur coats, and names names and prices in telling you how to make four dollars do the work of five in the shopping that you do every day.

One of the first principles in wise buying, the author says, is to shop the store sales. Nearly every store has sales, some of them frequently, at which real bargains can be found. For instance, "How To Buy More For Your Money" says that a woman who followed sales closely in one typical city during 1947 could have bought an innerspring mattress for $21.97, marked down from $29.50. In another store boys' tee shirts were reduced from $1.39 to 50 cents, and a chenille spread that had been selling for $12 went down to $7.98.

Knowing quality is another key to saving money, Mr. Margolius says.

Give Lucille a Yard...

By Richard L. Coe

THANKS TO THE refreshing impudence of Lucille Ball, we have come to the conclusion that "Lured," at the Capitol, is supposed to be a comedy. At least we found some unexpected laughs in its its aimless mystery antics.

Miss Ball plays a Scotland Yard detective, which is surely something you cannot call type casting. Because her sharp tongue makes so charming an impression in her right cheek, Miss Ball is a consistently agreeable performer to have around.

At times "Lured" seems to be a caricature of itself—one of those foggy London adventures about missing girls, murder in the night and eccentric people. It took us quite a while to decide that it was supposed to be funny. Could be, of course, that we're just being charitable, but the name of the script writer suggests we're on the right track.

He is Leo Rosten, who used to write witty pieces for the New Yorker under the name Leonard Q. Ross. He does seem to have a split personality, for as Rosten he also wrote an almost definitive book on movieland, "Hollywood: The Movie Colony—The Movie Makers." So it's only fair to assume that as the author of this screen play Rosten-Ross is having fun.

Once you get past such an academic point, you probably will be able to relax and take "Lured" for the rambling nonsense that it is. It concerns an American chorus girl who's stranded in a London that exists only in mystery yarns. When a chum is murdered, she's employed by Inspector Charles Coburn of Scotland Yard to act as bait.

"LURED," United Artists release produced by James Nasser for Hunt Stromberg. Screenplay by Leo Rosten. Directed by Douglas Sirk. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Robert Fleming .....George Sanders
Sandra Carpenter .....Lucille Ball
Inspector Temple .....Charles Coburn
Maxwell .....Alan Mowbray
Julian Wilde .....Sir Cedric Hardwicke
Officer Barrett .....George Zucco
Dr. Morgani .....Joseph Calleia
Lucy Barnard .....Tanis Chandler
Artist .....Boris Karloff

"Young Girl Wanted"

Bait for what? Those "personal ads" in the newspapers, of which this country's closest approach seems to be the Saturday Review of Literature columns. You know: "Aged millionaire wants to meet young girl interested in petunias." Or some such thing. This seems to have been driving good, gray Scotland Yard into a polite frenzy.

There's no point going into the things that happen to Lucille once she's joined the force. They're highly unlikely but they're still rather fun if you don't know what's going to happen next. The cast is suavely baffled by whatever they're supposed to be doing and in it you find such accomplished mystery men as Boris Karloff, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, George Zucco, Joseph Calleia, Alan Mowbray and George Sanders, whose attraction for sleek young ladies never fails to astonish us. What's the guy got, anyway?

Also on the Capitol's screen are some swell sports clips, including the World Series windup and some of the razzle-dazzle gains of the grid past in "The Pigskin Parade."

VAUDEVILLE on the Capitol stage is representated by the Arnaut Brothers, whose bird courtship is still funny enough to make you wish there were more good acts on the circuit. These chaps don't need to hug a mike with a collection of "As-I-was-coming-over-to-the-theater" anecdotes that invariably are tasteless and old. It's a relief to find comedians who are not Broadway hillbillies. The other acts include Janye Walton, a fairish radio singer from Chicago; Mage and Karr, a dance team, and the Lee Henderson Dancers in two uninspired routines.

"HENRY V" is coming back to these parts for a two-day run at the Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Thursday and Friday, October 30 and 31. As was the policy during the film's record-breaking run at the Little, the film will be shown on a twice daily reserved seat policy. The price scale is $1.20 $1.80 for evening and 90 cents and $1.20 for matinees. Mail orders should be sent to the Hiser, with either checks or money order and a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

A NOVEL REVIVAL is on the books for the Columbia next week, when "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Tobacco Road" form an unlikely duo for opening Thursday. The combination has been tried in other cities and seems to work.

ALSO ON THE future books is "Grand Ole Opry," which will be coming to Constitution Hall for two performances on Friday, October 31. Impresario for this one is radio man Connie B. Gay, who describes himself as "an exponent of American Folk Music." At least some of the stars who do that Saturday night radio show from Nashville will be up, promises Connie.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe meets "The Winslow Boy" as he is off stage.

He's Tame Now

Clarence Morehouse, who was Dick Powell's stand-in on "To the Ends of the Earth," played the title role as a gorilla in "Ingagi" in 1929.

Licensed Ham

Larry Simms, now appearing with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake in "Blondie's Night Out," is a genuine ham now, for he recently received his amateur radio operator's license.

AMBER IN THE FLESH: Here she is, folks, Linda Darnell as "Forever Amber" and in a minute she's going to throw that brush at those naughty boys, Bruce Carlton and Harry Almsbury, who've been peeking. Cornel Wilde and Richard Greene play those bucks in the Technicolor film due at the Palace the 23d

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Dramatizing of Aid To Europe Suggested

Charles Luckman,
Citizens Food Committee,
The White House.

Dear Mr. Luckman:

Pearson

I hesitate to butt into your business, but since yours is a citizens' food committee, I, as a citizen, take the liberty of making a suggestion regarding your tough job of getting food to Europe.

It seems to me the hardest job we face is making sure this food is genuinely appreciated by the people of Europe as a friendly sacrifice from the people of the United States.

Last year, when we sent food to Europe, several million tons were unloaded efficiently and unostentatiously at the Havre docks—all accepted by most Frenchmen as a matter of course.

Simultaneously, in Marseilles harbor, a cargo of Soviet wheat entered with flags flying, bands playing. There were street parades, a municipal holiday and paeans of praise for the great benefactors of the French people—Soviet Russia. Actually, the Russian cargo of wheat was a mere driblet capable of feeding the French only a week or so. Actually, it was American grain which supported the French people for months. And, contrary to the propaganda generally believed by the French, the Soviet wheat not only was paid for by the French government, but was paid for in hard-to-get dollars, not francs.

Finally, that Russian wheat came direct from the Soviet government—not from the Russian people. Not more than a handful of Russian people even know about it. The American wheat, on the other hand, was saved and collected after a mass campaign by all the American people, in which farmers shipped wheat early and every housewife cut down on her use of bread.

In other words, ours was a genuine gesture of friendship to the people of France and Europe from the people of America, but the people of Europe never fully realized that this was the case.

This time, Communist leaders in France and Italy already are preparing to unload a few cargoes of Russian wheat with great fanfare in order to repeat their successful propaganda of one year ago. They want history to repeat. And if we are not very careful it will.

So my suggestion to the Citizens Food Committee is that this time we take steps to see that the people of Europe evaluate this campaign for exactly what it is—a genuine sacrifice from the heart of America.

To that end I make the further suggestion that we arrange for the collection of this food direct from the heart of America in such a way that it can be visualized and dramatized and that the real story will be told to the millions of people we are trying to help.

Why not dramatize the story of America's sacrifice by running a "Friendship Train" straight across the United States, straight through the heart of America, collecting food as it goes, inspiring the housewives and farmers of the Nation to spare a bag of flour or a bushel of wheat and bring it down to the Friendship Train as their contribution toward friendship with the people of Europe?

I am sure that patriotic Governor Earl Warren would accompany the train through his State to Nevada, and that Governor Pittman would then carry on across Nevada to Utah with other Governors cooperating in their States. I am certain also that every newspaper editor in the cities through which the Friendship Train passes would be eager and anxious to explain its mission. And I know that some of the patriotic actors of Hollywood could and would accompany the train in order to dramatize the story of Europe and the part food can play in building a new Democracy.

Finally I am sure that the original "Friendship Train, starting at Los Angeles with one boxcar to hold the sacks of flour and bags of wheat donated by the people of each city, would add new boxcars at San Francisco, Sacramento, Reno, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Denver and Omaha, until it became a great rolling tribute from the heart of America rumbling across the continent to New York and thence to Europe. This visible gesture of the generosity of America would more than offset the cooked-up fanfare of Communist leaders of Europe and would convince the people of Europe that this food comes not from the United States Government as a part of its foreign policy but is scraped together from every dinner table in America—a sacrifice from the American people to their less-fortunate fellow men.

Getting food to Europe, no matter how it's sent, is important. But how much better that it be received not as barter between governments — a deal whereby the foreign minister of a country pawns his political support to the United States or American in return for a mess of American pottage!

How much more important, if the recipients of this food interpret it not as a cold and calculated move, but rather what it really is—a movement by the American people to stint their own dinner tables to help neighbors in distress who in turn are helped to make democracy live!

Perhaps I'm cockeyed on this, or perhaps you have a better way of getting this idea across. In any event, this is merely a suggestion from one citizen vitally interested in the success of your citizens' food committee.

Sincerely yours,
DREW PEARSON.

$3,000,000 Sanitary Bond Issue Approved

A proposed three-million-dollar bond issue to finance a broad program of sanitary improvements in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties was approved yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The board's action, taken at a special meeting at Hyattsville, followed a similar move by the Montgomery commissioners earlier this week. Approval of both counties is required before the bonds can be floated by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, which proposes to undertake the improvement program.

The request for the county's approval was presented earlier in the week by J. Darby Bowman, secretary-treasurer of the sanitary commission, but arried too late for consideration at the commissioners' regular meeting on Tuesday.

The Commissioners also moved yesterday to seek State funds for the improvement of four roads within the county by asking T. Howard Duckett, member of a State roads committee, to present the requests to highway officials.

Improvements sought by the county include widening and improving of the Southern Maryland Pike; improvement of the Marlboro Pike; widening of Queens Chapel rd., and extension of Rhode Island ave. from Hyattsville to Beltsville.

Leviness Fined $10,000 for Tax Evasion

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Charles T. LeViness 3d, 44-year-old attorney who had held several State offices, paid $10,000 in fines and $73.90 in costs today after a jury convicted him of about $9500 in Federal income tax evasions.

Associates and court attaches indicated he probably will be disbarred, since such action follows almost automatically after conviction of an attorney on a felony charge.

LeViness faced the possibility of 10 years' imprisonment and $20,000 in fines when he rose and stood rigid before Federal Judge William C. Coleman.

The judge asked him if he had anything to add to the testimony and statements of his attorneys.

"No, sir," said LeViness. "I know and feel in my heart that I am innocent."

Judge Coleman took note of the recommendation for mercy made by a jury of 10 men and 2 women which convicted the attorney after deliberating more than six hours last night.

"I cannot refrain," said the judge, "from making the observation that it is difficult to give weight to such a recommendation when the defendant has taken the witness stand and has given a story which the jury itself must have found untrue or it would not have reached its verdict of guilty."

The Government accused LeViness of failing to report some of his most lucrative fees in 1943 and 1944, including one $2500 retainer.

During the years in question, LeViness was a key figure in the administration of former Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Virginia Ranks 18th in U. S. Milk, Butter Income

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—An income of $360,600,000 from the sale of milk, cream, and butter in 1946 ranked Virginia eighth among the South Atlantic States and 18th in the Nation, the State Dairymen's Association reported today.

Recently compiled figures showed that the State's 437,000 milk cows produced an average of 4190 pounds of milk per animal during 1946 to rank 33d in the Nation, the association said. The national average for the year was listed at 4891 pounds per cow.

The report showed that Virginia agriculture, counting livestock and crops, produced an income of $360,600,000 in 1946, of which $49,642,000 or 13.6 per cent was acounted for by sale of milk, cream, and butter.

Martinsville, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—After pleading guilty to a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Abraham Barner on August 17, Ivory Manns of Martinsville, was sentenced to serve 20 years in the State Penitentiary by the Henry County Circuit Court yesterday.

Under a suspended one-year sentence imposed last year in the same court on a charge of malicious wounding, Manns was indicted earlier this week for the murder of Barner.

Court Grants New Trials in Va. Bank Case

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson late today granted motions for new trials in the involved Fredericksburg bank case.

Appeal of the case on its merits already is scheduled for argument before the Fourth United States Circuit Court of Appeals Monday. At that time, attorneys for seven of nine persons convicted before Judge J. Waties Waring on charges of aiding in the misapplication of more than $435,000 from the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, Fredericksburg, were due to ask for a reversal.

Those appealing from their convictions are Hugh N. Rakes and his wife Lillian C. Rakes, Clarence L. Robey, Delegate Joseph E. Proffit, Joseph A. Sowers, Kyle M. Weeks, Harry Lamson.

Judge Hutcheson's ruling today followed his entry into the case Wednesday when Judge Waring disqualified himself from hearing argument for a new trial.

The arguments were based on the fact that Thomas L. Madison, one of the jurors in the eight-week trial here last spring, reported that he had been asked to hang the jury.

Defense attorneys argued Wednesday that this report was known to Judge Waring, but that the trial judge failed to apprise defense counsel of the occurrence. They told Judge Hutcheson that Judge Waring should have replaced Madison with one of the alternate jurors rather than permit him to deliberate the case after he had been approached.

Snake Cultists Plan Meeting On Virginia Line

Stone Creek, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Holiness faith healers from a five-State area are planning their biggest demonstration of the summer atop Black Mountain on the Virginia-Kentucky line near here Sunday night with the promise that 12-year-old Fay Nolan will be on hand to attest to her recovery from a rattlesnake bite.

The tiny daughter of Roscoe Nolan, Cawood, Ky., miner, was spirited away to a mountainous hideout "for a rest" after her arm turned gangrenous as the result of a bite at a faith-meeting near her home September 16. Ten days ago it was reported she was "almost well and doing fine."

As at former meetings, they'll avoid the long arm of the law by shifting from Kentucky to Virginia when the former State's police officer appear—then back to Kentucky should Virginia troopers seek to enforce the statute forbidding snake handling in public gatherings.

Poultrymen Cite Record Feed Prices

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Virginia growers at summer's end were paying about 4 cents more than during the past spring for the feed required to produce a pound of poultry meat, according to the State Poultry Federation.

In an article prepared for the forthcoming issue of the organization's magazine, the Virginia Poultryman, Executive Secretary R. Frank Frazier listed higher poultry and egg prices as apparently the only avenue of relief from record feed prices open to poultrymen.

Frazier pointed out that the 1947 corn crop already is short of last year's record production by an estimated 876 million bushels, a figure 16 per cent greater than the total amount of all grains purchased for shipment abroad in the year ended last June 30.

The poultry industry, facing smaller grain supplies and higher grain prices, still must share available grain with other countries, Frazier stated.

He cited a U. S. Department of Agricultrue prediction that the 1947 production of corn, oats, barley and sorghum grains would be 22 per cent smaller than in 1946 and said conservative feed men could not foresee an end to high feed prices, except for temporary seasonal setbacks.

Frazier described State turkey growers as in an improved position as a result of a recent upswing in Turkey prices and a more favorable outlook for holiday marketing.

Labor Savers For Farmers Demonstrated

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—A State-sponsored exhibit on labor saving devices drew an estimated 600 housewives, farmers and school children here today.

Planned by agriculture experts at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, the exhibit touched on virtually every phase of farm life. The local demonstration, held in a new garage on North Main st., was arranged by Farm Agent J. A. Coffey and Home Demonstration Agent Elizabeth Farrar.

Farmers were shown how to plan their fields so that fewer turns would be required when plowing and planting. A model cattle-guard device was exhibited to demonstrate how time could be saved in opening and closing gates.

Housewives glowed at the sight of a turntable cupboard in the corner of a modern kitchen sink and cabinet combination, one of the most popular items shown. The device allows a housewife to open a cabinet door and spin the inside part around until the pot or pan desired is available.

According to D. A. Tucker of VPI, who is in charge of the shows, their purpose is to demonstrate how labor can be saved on modern farms.

The exhibit was held yesterday in Manassas and tomorrow will move on to the Madison Courthouse in Madison County, Va.

Va. Educator Asks State Sales Tax To Aid Schools

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—A State sales tax to finance a public education program that would put Virginia "at the head of the school system of the South" was urged today by Dr. George H. Denny of Lexington, chairman of the General Assembly's special school commission of 1944.

Writing in the news letter of the University of Virginia, the educator summed up his review of actions which have resulted from the Denny commission's report three years ago. A survey of the recommendations made by the commission disclosed that 25 of them had been adopted to a limited extent. No action had been taken on the remainder, Dr. Denny noted.

Oberving that Virginia had the necessary "material resources" to improve its schools, Dr. Denny declared that the question of providing better schools "is solely a matter of our willingness to be taxed as other States are taxing themselves."

Legion Museum Fund Of $120,000 Urged

Newport News, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—A commission created by the 1947 session of the General Assembly to study matters relating to the American Legion museum at Newport News recommended today that the museum be made a State memorial to World War II veterans and that $120,000 be appropriated for enlarging the present building.

The recommendations of the special commission were submitted to Governor Tuck and his advisory commission on the budget during an inspection trip in the Newport News area. The group visited the museum during the day.

Fair Ends Today

Prize Stock Judged at Marlboro

Judging of dairy cattle and a spirited weight-pulling contest for farm draft horses rang down the curtain on the competitive phase of the annual Marlboro (Md.) Fair yesterday.

With one more day to go, the program will center today on a livestock parade featuring the prize cattle which have shared in the distribution of more than $8000 in prizes in the last four days. A horse show is slated tomorrow as an anticlimax to the actual fair program.

Principal interest yesterday was centered on the pulling contests, in which a rugged team owned by I. N. Shepherd of Harwood, established a new fair record for heavyweight pairs. The horses, Cracker and Prince, pulled an estimated 20½ tons a distance of 22 feet to win first place in a runoff with the team entered by Earle Bartow of Hagerstown.

In the lightweight contest, for horses under 3000 pounds, the State championship team owned by Nutwell Brothers Farm, of West River, won handily over a field of six entries. The winners, Smoke and Rocky, hauled an 18-ton load 27½ feet.

As has been the case in the past several days, prizes in the cattle contests were monopolized by a comparatively small group of exhibitors. Only two entries shared in the 17 first places awarded Holstein contestants, while top prizes in the 21 classes for Guernseys went to three exhibitors.

In the Holstein division, 10 first-prize ribbons went to Cecil Holter & Sons, of Jefferson, Md., while the remaining seven were won by A. Doty Remsburg of Middletown. Guernsey prize winners were J. Herbert Snyder of Union Bridge, with 15 blue ribbons; Leroy H. Hersey of Edgewater, with four, and Walter L. Wayson of Davisonville, with two.

Penny Milk Plan Grows In Schools

More schools are participating in the penny milk program this year than last and available funds still will permit a few more to sign up.

Harry M. Gardner, administrator of the program for the District, said that 85 schools are receiving the milk, an increase of 12 over last year.

The program has the same working capital as last year but lower prices charged by dairies are making the expansion possible, he said.

Actual cost of the milk served last year was 5 cents a bottle. This year dairies are supplying the half pints for 3.9 cents, Gardner said.

Under the program, designed to encourage children to drink milk, 1 cent is paid by the children, 2 cents by the Federal Government through National School Lunch Act funds, and the remainder by the District.

Gardner said that all elementary schools are eligible for the program. To participate a school applies through its principal to the superintendent of schools. Final approval is given by the Board of Commissioners.

Schools not taking penny milk, Gardner said, generally have their own milk program. Individual schools contract with dairies.

Miss Bertha E. Taylor, who is in charge of penny milk for the schools, said that in past years only schools in low income areas have been encouraged to join the program because of the limitation of funds. She emphasized though that penny milk is not a relief but a nutritional program.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 10 (AP).—Unemployment Compensation Board Manager D. Lee Staley reported today that while only 350 Hagerstown residents were receiving jobless pay and there were 900 seeking work.

Four Win Stay In Oyster Dredge Case

La Plata, Md., Oct. 10 (AP).—A defense attorney's contention that Maryland's recodified oyster conservation laws are "the most confused chapter" in the statute books won a verdict stay for four men accused of illegal dredging.

Magistrate Edward S. Digges took the case of Perry Gibson, John F. Oliver, Thomas E. Bailey and Paul M. Bailey under consideration.

They were arrested September 25 on charges of illegal dredging in the Wicomico River.

Defense Attorney John F. Mudd said he could find nothing in the 1945 revised laws to prohibit dredging in the river, although it has traditionally been considered illegal.

The law also states, said Mudd, "any officer of the (Tidewater Fisheries) department" shall make arrests. The four defendants were arrested by a Charles County deputy sheriff.

"In fact," observed Mudd, "the more I studied the law, the more confused I became."

Mudd's claims of confusion were reported to three members of the Maryland General Assembly. They said they might ask a special session of the General Assembly to be called this fall to clear it up.

Virginia Farm Families Drop In Generation

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—The average size of Virginia farm families apparently has decreased in the span of a single generation.

A survey of 148 students enrolled in a basic rural sociology course at Virginia Tech this fall showed that the greatest single number, 32, came from families with three children.

Data on the fathers of 148 students showed that the largest number, 31, were from families of five children.

Nine of the fathers were only children, while 14 of the students were from one-child families. Eleven fathers were one of two children, while 26 of the students were one of two.

The survey, taken by Dr. Leland B. Tate of the rural sociology department, counted only those children who survived to adulthood. Nearly all of the 148 were from farm families.

New Reporter Scores "Beat" on Fire at Monument

Years ago, a new and very green cub reporter showed up at Police Headquarters in search of news.

One of the bluecoats of that day had a flair for practical jokes, so he gave the newcomer a "scoop."

"The awnings on the Washington Monument have caught fire," he announced.

The reporter went dashing off to cover the destruction of those non-existent awnings, and from that day on, the prank became standard operating procedure at headquarters.

Yesterday, our City Desk sent a brand new reporter up to cover headquarters, and before long our man called in with his first story.

"The awnings on the Washington Monument are on fire," he announced.

"Okay," yawned the desk, "we'll send a man right over."

RECKLESS DIVERS

Andy F. Kisacky of 1929 1st st. nw., realizing his own weakness for puns, refuses to comment on this clipping from our esteemed morning contemporary:

"The brothers then dove to a farm a half mile away."

Gabe Menendez, who has witnessed many a tank job in his day, assures me that this is undoubtedly a world record.

BUSINESSMAN

The 9-year-old son of a friend of mine has set himself up in business.

He rents out comic books at 2 cents per day to the kids in his neighborhood. The profits go into the purchase of additional comic books.

If his rental library continues to grow, he'll probably throw some business his father's way some day. Papa is commercial manager of a local radio station, and is always on the lookout for affluent sponsors.

TAKE YOUR PICK

Our sports department is running a "Pick the Grid Winners" Contest. Twenty upcoming games are listed, and the readers are invited to try their skill at predicting the outcomes of these games.

We've gotten several calls asking whether it's okay to submit more than one entry, and we've always answered "yes." One caller replied:

"Then I'm a cinch to win. I'll just submit an entry for every possible combination."

L. S. Weitzman of 1401 S. George Mason dr., Arlington, Va., observes that our industrious caller had better provide himself with plenty of pencils and paper.

This demon statistician points out that three results are possible in each of the 20 games: victory, defeat, and a tie.

The number of possible combinations is therefore 3 to the 20th power—or 3,487,000,000.

LIFE IS LIKE THAT

(The following letter is from a District Liner who will remain anonymous by request.)

Thanks to the Fairlington Association's biweekly paper salvage drive, a new children's slide was recently purchased and installed.

We parents took turns serving as volunteer play yard supervisors.

One evening as my family was at dinner there was a knock at our door, and my eldest answered it. We heard a little girl say:

"The big boys won't let us slide. Will you ask your daddy to come out and make them behave?"

My son returned with the message, and Mother suggested a reply.

"Why don't you tell her that we're at dinner, dear, and ask her if she can't get her own daddy to straighten things out?"

When the little girl got the message, a lump came to my throat as I heard her quiet answer.

"I can't," she said simply. "My daddy is in heaven."

We found out later that he was a war casualty.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

C. F. Kraft of Falls Church, Va., has a suggestion for us:

"Speaking of advertising signs on the ceilings of barber shops, how about showing movies on the ceilings of dental offices? Lana Turner might make you forget about Phyllis Cavity."

Yes, and I've seen a couple of movies lately that would make anesthetic completely obsolete.

"We now bring you a man eminently qualified to speak on World Affairs—former barber, waiter, cab driver, elevator man—"

Gypsy Rose Has Some Dreams

NEW YORK—Gypsy Rose Lee completed her six months' cross-country tour and returned to New York to prepare her program for next season. She complained to her friends that she was unable to resume her work. Miss Lee started to write again, but couldn't get going.

One night, at a party, Dick Kollmar entertained by hypnotizing some of the guests, including Gypsy Rose Lee—who found herself susceptible to post-hypnotic influence. Every day, since then, she's had herself hypnotized by Kollmar, and insists that as a result she's been able to complete writing a book, two acts of a play for her sister, June Havoc, and a musical comedy.

Kollmar's hypnotic influence is complete: He'll produce her musical.

The movie which Greta Garbo will make for the Olivier-Cukor-Viertel-Cusick group will be the story of George Sand . . . Gen. Mark Clark is in New York posing for a portrait by Joseph Cummings Chase. This is one of a series of war leaders' portraits commissioned by the War Department.

Johnny Lindell was the only World Series ballplayer who didn't celebrate by taking a drink Monday night, after the series ended. Lindell, who has a fractured rib, was warned by his doctor that he mustn't drink until the fracture heals.

Lindsay & Crouse will revive "Life With Father" in seven years, when the Warner Bros. rental ends.

John Steinbeck and Robert Capa returned from their Moscow trip last weekend. Capa, whose new book, "Slightly Out of Focus," has just sold out its first edition, was in Sardi's last night with Jerry Mason of "This Week." Mason asked him about interesting anecdotes of their trip, for possible use.

"So many events piled up on us, but they're really not stories as yet," said Capa. "Wait a couple of days. And after Steinbeck and I have had a chance to re-tell and dramatize them, they'll be good stories."

Lloyd Douglas, author of "The Robe," is recovering from his recent illness and is at work on his next book, "The Big Fisherman," about St. Peter.

Samuel Hoffenstein, the poet-screen writer who died in Hollywood, was one of the most popular members of the film colony. It was Hoffenstein who, at the auto show, said: "What a lucky thing that the wheel was invented before the automobile was. Otherwise, you can imagine the awful screeching."

Eddie Duchin met Oscar Levant, whose hair seemed more ruffled than usual, as if he had been sleeping on a couch. "This," said Levant, "is my analyst coiffeur."

Lucille Ball won her release from her M-G-M contract last week, making her free to accept the lucrative offers she has received . . . Jose Iturbi has been awarded a new decoration from the French government. He's an officer of the Legion of Honor.

Life magazine has assigned Frank Schershel to photograph the Elizabeth-Mountbatten wedding in London. By way of rehearsal of the camera work for this event, the editors assigned Schershel to photograph the wedding of the Duke of Alba's daughter.

First National Capital Home Exhibition Opens Today

170 Exhibit Booths Jam Guard Armory

By Conrad P. Harness

EXHIBITORS have put the finishing touches on their booths and the city's first Annual National Capital Home Show Exposition is set to open its doors today at 1:30 p. m. at the National Guard Armory.

The 80,000 square feet of floor area at 2001 East Capitol st. is jam packed with the newest items of interest to present or prospective home owners.

FOLEY

In the opening ceremonies at the East Capitol street entrance, the Government's top housing expert, Raymond Foley, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, will make the main address. Introducing Foley will be Clarence W. Gosnell, Home Show chairman. Donald L. Chamberlin, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, sponsor of the show, also will speak. The ceremonies will be televised and broadcast, Larry Hanson, association executive secretary, said.

Twenty Prizes Daily

THE show's main accent is on items for the kitchen. Scores of complete kitchens have been set up so visitors can marvel at the planned efficiency of labor saving devices, tiled walls, asphalt tile floors, fluorescent lighting and enlarged cabinet space.

Twenty prizes will be given away daily to visitors, Hanson declared. There will be a "prize period" each afternoon and night when products will be awarded lucky ticket holders answering questions on a quiz program.

The show will be open daily from 1 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. until October 19. Admission for adults is 80 cents each. Admission is free for children under 12 if accompanied by adults.

There are 21 educational exhibits, many sponsored by Government agencies. There are "institutional" exhibits by the Community Chest Federation, District Public Library, District of Columbia Building & Loan League, American Institute of Architects, Washington Real Estate Board, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, American Legion, District National Guard, National Capital Park & Planning Commission, Radio Station WPIK, National Broadcasting Co. and Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

OTHER educational exhibits are sponsored by Montgomery County Real Estate Board, Federal Housing Administration, Veterans Administration, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, Greater, National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, United States Department of Labor, National Home & Property Owners Foundation, United States Treasury D. C. Savings Bond Division and Bender Termite Control Co.

GOSNELL

Thirty-one exhibitions are included in the "Electric Village" section, in cooperation with the Electric Institute of Washington. New products are too numerous to mention. They range from new type windows to termite control equipment, with the large emphasis on kitchen equipment.

Among the displays are windows, flooring, clothes closet items, heating units, shower cabinets, paint, gas equipment, fireplace equipment, millwork, plumbing equipment, wall paper, doors, electric saws, tools, insulating materials, plastics, awnings, sculptured glass, furniture, home freezers, model kitchens, power tractors, fans and dozens of other items.

Landscaping Can Be Started While the House Goes Up

MANY people are thinking ahead to late fall when they can finally move into the new homes that they now have under construction.

Most of these folks are faced with a landscaping problem about which little can be done until construction is pretty well completed and the grounds cleared of building litter. Meanwhile, they itch to get some planting started.

Actually, some parts of this program can best be done now. For one thing, people should get acquainted with the plant materials they are going to use. They should make it a point to see the different plants growing and, in that way, to make sure that they have the desired appearance. And this is particularly important where deciduous trees are to be used since, if selection is delayed until the planting season, the trees, then being bare, will have little about them to indicate their actual summer appearance.

What is the best way to proceed? Homer L. Jacobs, director of research of the Davey Tree Expert Co., suggests the prospective tree owners first establish a tentative list of species and then check up by finding and examining each kind of tree while it is in leaf.

Some of the things to watch are: Is the general shape and appearance of the tree attractive? Is the texture and color of the foliage really beautiful? Will the tree provide adequate shade? Will its shade be so heavy that the lawn cannot be maintained beneath it? Is it a strong tree—one that will survive storms? Does it have good Autumn color? Is it clean or always dropping flowers, leaves, fruit, bark or twigs?

Will it become too large for the [illegible]ended? How will it thrive under existing soil and environmental conditions? The easiest check on this last point, according to Jacobs, is to notice whether it is now being planted in the neighborhood and if so, with what results.

If the prospective tree owner is observant and guides himself by what he sees, the trees he selects should do well and be a source of increasing beauty and satisfaction.

Electric Loads Tax Old Wiring

Most homes more than 10 years old were wired for lighting purposes only. Today they are forced to carry an appliance load that is too much for efficiency. This extra load in the usual home is equivalent to an increase of approximately two thirds the original load.

Overloaded wires leak, lack power, and run up costs. The lights dim, appliances do not function properly, and each task takes longer than it should.

Not only should the wires carry a load adequate for present needs, but they should be able to take care of reasonable expansion. The need for this is readily understood when a home owner reflects on present-day household uses of electricity and compares them with those of 15 years ago. Not only are more appliances being used, but modern homes are planned for more light.

Odors and Heat Chased

Kitchen odors can be eliminated from the kitchen by use of an exhaust fan installed in the wall, window, or even in the transom over the door. This device is also an aid to cooling the kitchen in summer.

Here Are The Facts:

How Much Should the House Cost?

IN BUILDING or buying a house, as in everything you buy, the most important decision to make is, "How much money do you want to spend?"

When you judge the price of a house, remember that the old yardstick of evaluating a house by the number of rooms it has is no longer valid. Two houses exactly alike in plan and appearance may be wide apart in price. The difference is to be found in the comforts, conveniences, equipment and built-in features. Like the difference between the standard and the de luxe model automobile. They're basically the same car, and they'll both carry five passengers, but there's a great difference in the appointments.

Under today's lending systems, the cost of the house and lot is usually kept down to a maximum of 2½ times the annual income of the borrower. Thus, if you are earning $4000 per year, you could have a house and lot costing $10,000. If your earnings average $2500, you could finance a house and lot costing about $7250. As a general rule, the cost of the lot should not be more than 15 per cent of the total building costs. This is not always possible in large cities, however.

Most mortgages are written on the basis of paying off monthly over a total of 15, 20 or 25 years. If you are under 50 years of age, you will probably be able to obtain a 20-year mortgage. Under favorable circumstances, FHA allows a 25-year mortgage on a house and lot costing less than $6000.

Figuring the Down Payment

IN figuring the amount of money you will need, the following are minimum amounts needed under normal circumstances, and not using a GI loan. For a house and lot appraised at $6000 or less, you will need 10 per cent cash for a down payment; over $7000 and less than $10,000 takes 10 per cent on the first $8000 and 20 per cent on the balance; over $10,000 takes 20 per cent of the entire cost.

Thus, for a house appraised at $6000, built on a lot worth $800, a total of $6800, you need $760. This is 10 per cent of $8000, which is $600 and 20 per cent or $160.

As to monthly payments, you can figure that each $1000 of your mortgage will cost you about $8 to $8.75 per month for 20 years, and $7.25 to $8 per month if your mortgage is for 25 years; slightly less on GI loans.

So a $6000 house-and-lot, with a down payment of $760 will cost you, on a 20-year basis, about $48 per month. This figure includes payments on the principal, interest, taxes and insurance on the property.

In addition to your down payment, you will need money for fire insurance, title search, etc. Two per cent of the cost of the house and lot will usually cover these fees.

Equipment in the Mortgage

AN important new development in home mortgages is inclusion of home equipment in the mortgage as part of the cost of the house. (See article on "Package Mortgage" by C. H. Ellingson in this issue.) This means that you can include things like a dishwasher, refrigerator, stove, home freezer, built-in furniture and, in fact, most of the equipment you need and want to operate your house at the time you buy or build it. Thus your house is complete when you move in, with this equipment financed on the terms of your home mortgage. So $500 worth of equipment on the basis of 20 per cent down and 20 years to pay would add only $100 to your down payment and about $3 to your monthly payments.

Be sure to look into this when you make your mortgage and find out just how much equipment you can put in on this basis.

If you buy a finished house, the builder will help you arrange for financing. If you are going to build, you must have plans and specifications for your house and a lot picked out. The next two steps are to go to a reputable builder for a bona fide bid on your house and to a lending agency savings and loan association, bank or mortgage company.

To Arrange for Financing

THE easiest place to arrange all this is with the builder or with your financing agency.

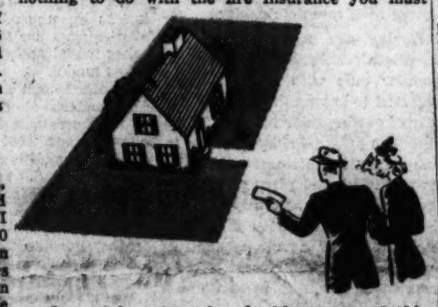
A word about FHA—the Federal Housing Administration. FHA does not lend any money, but only insures the loan you make so that the party who lends the money will not lose if the borrower defaults.

FHA will work with practically any recognized lending agency, but there is no law that compels either the borrower or the lender to operate under FHA. Many lenders, particularly savings and loan associations, are glad to make loans independent of FHA and on the same monthly installment, long-term basis. If you have the money for a down payment larger than the minimum, you might get even more favorable interest rates than FHA prescribes.

FHA has minimum construction standards on which it insists to protect the loan, but in the vast majority of cases builders build better than those minimums.

Such agencies as savings and loan associations also have minimum standards, as well as inspection service while the house is being built, protecting the home owner against bad workmanship and materials.

The highest interest rate allowed by FHA is 4½ per cent, to which is added ½ per cent for mortgage insurance to protect the lender. (This has nothing to do with the fire insurance you must take out.) Thus, the total charge under FHA will not exceed 5 per cent.



Cost of house and lot should not exceed 2½ times your annual income.

Prepayment Clause

MAKE sure your mortgage contains a prepayment clause. That is, the privilege of paying more than the usual monthly payment. FHA mortgages do have such clauses. At any time you may make extra payments in the same amount as your regular monthly payments. Such extra payments cut down the number of months it takes to pay off the loan. Some contracts allow you to credit advance payments against your mortgage if you should be unable to meet a monthly payment.

The practice of charging a penalty, usually 1 per cent of the amount of the loan, is gradually being discontinued. It is now possible to make a mortgage giving the privilege of advance payments in specified amounts, without penalty. Ask for it, you may very likely get it.

Another thing, if you are building a house rather than buying, is to make an agreement, if possible, with the lending agency that you are not to pay interest while the house is going up, except for money actually paid out.

GI Bill of Rights

THE GI Bill of Rights enables those who served in World War II to borrow mortgage money from private lenders at a maximum rate of 4 per cent through the loan guarantee of the Veterans Administration. Under some circumstances the amount of the loan may be virtually 100 per cent of the cost of the house and lot. These are loans, not gifts, and veterans, to qualify, must be financially responsible. The loans are made with private agencies, which agencies are insured by the Veterans' Administration against loss on a part of the loan.

This law is too complicated to explain here, nor is it necessary for the home owner to know its technicalities. Just follow the same procedure as in any other case and tell the lender who is going to make your loan that you are a veteran and want a "GI loan."

GI loans may be applied for within 10 years after separation from the military or naval forces. Government will guarantee loans up to $4000. The veteran has up to 25 years to pay out his loan. Apply direct to lender.

Every Child Rates Room To Play In

By Harriet Morrison

IT HAS come to our attention that a great many children have trouble finding parking space for trains, boats, sleds, doll carriages, stuffed animals, collections of fish worms, drums, trucks, steam shovels, not to mention a platoon or two of Marines.

They also have trouble finding space to put these objects in motion. This is particularly true in the case of city children or those in one-level houses.

To resolve these problems, we point to the room on page two. It is the work of Joseph Aronson, interior architect, and is on display at the American Toy Institute in New York City as an example of what can be done to provide usable space for children in small quarters at a reasonable cost.

Mr. Aronson firmly upholds the theory that a child, as much as any adult, is entitled to space all his own in which to pursue his activities and stow his possessions.

Above All Else

The test of success for such space is first of all, that it meets the needs of the child. This sounds easy, but Mr. Aronson believes that too many parents think they are satisfying the child, when actually they are only pleasing themselves. Of course, a child rarely divulges his needs in words. But if he draws all over the living room walls, this is a hint to give him a room where he can draw on large surfaces.

The child should gravitate toward this space willingly and should find his prized possession in plain view resting in low, open cubbyholes.

Should Be Large

Playing space should be large enough for all kinds of action, including climbing, skipping and running. But the acid test for a child's playroom, believes Mr. Aronson, is this: the room must be used and abused to be successful. It should be in no shape to hand down to the next generation.

Finding this space is the parents' responsibility. If the parents do not provide it the child is likely (and with good reason, say the experts) to carry on his activities in areas of the house where they are not in the least appreciated. Why blame him?

The child's sleeping room is a last resort as a playroom, believes Mr. Aronson. He would much rather see a separate area set aside

New Shower Stall To Be on Display

A new type shower stall with glass door will be displayed by James A. Messer Co., wholesale plumbing and heating supplies firm, at booth 72-A at the Home Show Exposition.

The firm said the shower stall strikes a middle note between the low and high priced models and has proven highly popular.

Success Crowns Efforts Of FHA Over 13 Years

(To newly appointed FHA Commissioner Richards we put the question: "What is FHA doing to stimulate home construction and lower home costs?")

By Franklin D. Richards

Commissioner, Federal Housing Administration

THE best way to answer The Washington Post's inquiry is to let the facts speak for themselves.

First, we must view the whole national picture. Never has there been such general public interest in housing problems or a greater backlog of housing demand.

Goals of the National Housing Act which created the Federal Housing Administration are as timely today as when written in 1934. Those purposes are: to encourage improvement in housing conditions; to provide an adequate home financing system to make debt free home ownership possible; and to exercise a degree of stability in the mortgage and real estate market.

Our efforts to carry out these purposes have been adapted to three economic eras. First, there were the prewar years of the thirties when the problem was to convince industry and the public of the advantages of the long term, completely amortized mortgage over the previous general practice of short term, renewable notes.

RICHARDS

During this era the FHA also waged a campaign for the high ratio single mortgage over the much more costly and then accepted practice of low ratio first mortgages with additional financing on the basis of a second or third mortgage.

Today it is hard to believe that only 13 years ago these programs of the FHA were looked upon as innovations. Today, they are standard practice.

Next came the war era when a major activity of the Federal Housing Administration was to assist through private industry in providing housing for workers in vital war industries.

The record shows that 714,890 emergency housing units were provided, primarily with the aid of FHA emergency financing. During these war years FHA's broad experience was made available to all housing agencies. Our field offices processed applications for priorities, established rents and sales prices on newly constructed dwelling properties, reviewed the use of critical materials, and performed many other functions for agencies responsible for the control of materials needed in the war effort.

The postwar period has brought with it a new emergency and perplexing housing problems, especially by veterans. This unprecedented demand is accompanied by the pressure of idle funds and the uncertainties of material supply.

Costs Spiraled

THE first step in meeting the emergency was the revival of Title VI to aid in financing homes for veterans and in May, 1946, the Veterans Emergency Housing program began. Under Title VI "Necessary current cost" was made the basis for the 90 per cent limitation upon the amount of mortgages and the maximum interest rate was fixed at 4 per cent.

Instead of returning to normal operations we found our task complicated by increasing costs, accompanied by such insistent demands for housing, regardless of the cost. Shortages of building materials and skilled labor were reflected in sharp cost rises.

The situation called for most careful consideration by lenders and by the FHA, whose past valuations have been readily accepted by borrower and lender alike. In its consideration of costs the FHA is not primarily concerned about possible losses to its Title VI insurance fund. Its concern is for the home buyer who must borrow in order to buy. If he is not successful in meeting his obligation the transaction is not a success.

It is concerned, too, with high costs because of their effect on the continuance of home building by private enterprise and its effect on the national economy. There are some indications that the long awaited leveling off period in costs has arrived. Many facts point to this conclusion. For several months the building industry has been free of controls. Construction materials are becoming more readily available and the competitive market is being reestablished.

FHA cost figures tell a concise story of the trend. At the beginning of 1941 current costs nationally were reflected at 100; five years later in January, 1946, the national index showed an average current cost of 142; then during the year 1946 there was a sharp increase to 181, partially as a result of termination of price controls. Only 16 points of this increase took place in the last five months of 1946.

In sharp contrast to this decidedly upward trend in costs, FHA cost figures show that instead of uniform increases during the first eight months of 1947 there have been several localities where costs have gone down. The over-all picture shows that nationally the average increase has been only three points. When compared to the previous five months when costs were up 16 points, a three-point increase in eight months is reassuring.

One important factor in arresting the rapid cost increase is undoubtedly the gradual reduction of the construction period. When material supplies were extremely critical, the average construction period for a single-family house ran from 10 to 12 months. As material supply conditions improved, construction time has been reduced. Latest field reports indicate that in the majority of areas the average construction period is now five months, and further improvement may be expected as more materials become available.

Industry Must Join Hands

IN OUR present economy it has not been reasonable to assume that the cost of housing will soon return to the prewar levels. It is hoped that efficiency increases in construction and reduction in material prices will lower home costs.

Success will depend on the cooperation of lenders, builders and industry as a whole.

We are in the midst of a veterans' housing program. In outlining this program President Tru-

Quality Paint Will Reduce Repair Bills

Painting is one of the most important operations in the building of a new house from the standpoint of both appearance and upkeep. Skimping in painting is the poorest kind of economy, while quality materials properly mixed and placed are the best insurance against future repair bills.

All millwork should receive a prime coat before or immediately after installation.

Exterior woodwork should be painted with not less than three coats of paint, including the prime coat, except wood shingles and half-timber work, which may have two coats of stain or penetrating oil. When especially prepared by the manufacturer for the purpose, two-coat paint may be used, but it should be applied in strict accordance with the manufacturer's specifications.

All masonry or concrete walls, when painted, should have at least two brush coats of paint especially prepared for the purpose and applied according to recommendations.

Interior woodwork, if painted, should have at least two and preferably three coats of flat paint, or two coats of flat and one of enamel. In kitchens and bathrooms, a high-gloss enamel is advisable, as it is easier to keep clean and will stand more wear.

Architects List Ways to Cut Housing Costs

GREATER uniformity of zoning regulations, coordination of building regulations established by Federal agencies, and adoption of standard basis building codes by individual communities will reduce the housing costs, the American Institute of Architects has declared.

A copy of the statement on the subject by that organization has been filed with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, vice chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee investigating the housing shortage.

"In planning buildings constructed wholly with or assisted by Federal funds, we have found that each governmental agency has its own regulations, often without reference to other bureaus or agencies, even though they affect the same types of buildings to be used for similar purposes," Victor D. Abel of the AIA said. "Especially is this so in the case of housing.

"Furthermore, where federally-owned buildings are constructed on land owned by the Government, local building and related codes do not apply. As a result, the buildings are often designed and built without regard to local practices and regulations," Abel charged.

for a child's activities. An analysis of the entire house may suggest the attic or some other unused space.

If there is no other choice, then arrange the child's sleeping room for his waking hour pursuits. However, in such a case, Mr. Aronson presses the point that this must not be a room in which the child sleeps and incidentally plays. He stresses the importance of play and we are sure that children would agree.

The 12x18x9-foot room (a corner of which is shown here), offers several suggestions which could be adapted in various indoor situations. Because the floor is a favorite spot for serious playing, Mr. Aronson has left as much of it as free as possible.

The only loose furniture is a child-size table and chairs. What he did in the corner was simply to raise the floor and thus offer various levels—all of which are covered with tough linoleum that invites jumping, crawling, pounding or exploring. Opening off each level are spaces for stowing any assortment of objects desired.

Behind this structure is a stairway which converts to a slide. This is a delightful treat for those in stairless homes. On another wall a compartment containing an electric train comes down onto a built-in desk.

This desk also forms a garage for a tricycle. One side of it is equipped with a door which is useful when playing house, hide-and-go-seek, cops and robbers or pursuing other equally important activities.

Back of the desk is a drawing table plus more cubbyholes for toys. One wall of this model room is left free and waiting for a child's imagination. The fourth wall is equipped with more low, open shelves of varying heights.

Viewed from the door (from an adult viewpoint), the colorful room offers a large free surface (the floor) surrounded with tempting shelves, the lines of which flow together to form an over-all pleasing design.

This room adjusts to varying age levels. It can become a club room, work room, hobby room or game room for older children.

Shower Bath History Traced to Civil War

SHOWER baths, today such a popular feature of American bathrooms, date back to Civil War days, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

A Union commander by the name of Muldoon is reported to have used the lure of a shower bath at the end of a long day of hard fighting as a means of stimulating enlistment. The Muldoon version of a shower bath was a bucket with a perforated bottom. The bucket was hung in a tree. While one soldier poured water into it, the others stepped under it for their baths.

The first showers installed in American homes were called "rain baths." They were cabinets made with walls of heavy copper with soldered seams. They were difficult to install because they were shipped in one piece as a complete cabinet.

During the first part of the twentieth century showers were popular only with men. Women objected to showers because of the fear of getting their hair wet. This objection was, indeed, valid in some early installations where the shower head was placed too high and was usually the old type giant size, about 8 inches in diameter. The absence of a volume control valve in early showers also contributed to the aversion of women to a torrent of water.

In 1922, the first modern, prefabricated sectional type shower cabinet was designed and built. Since then all shower cabinets have been made in sections because of easier shipping and installation.

Modern showers have small, nonclogging heads, about 2 inches in diameter, and are not more than 72 inches high. A ball joint in the modern shower head enables the bather to direct the water flow to any part of the shower most convenient for personal use. Water temperature can be automatically controlled by a thermostatic valve or a two-valve arrangement.

With the advent of modern, adjustable shower heads, women delight in showers because of the convenience and cleanliness. Shower cabinets can easily be installed by any master plumber. They require neither reinforcement nor special preparation of floors and walls.

A popular size shower cabinet for the home owner who is remodeling is the 36 x 36 x 80 inches model, which may be obtained with a corner entrance to permit installation in an unused corner. Other favorite sizes are the 32 x 32 x 80 inches model and the 40 x 40 x 80 inches model.

Another popular variation in the modern shower, according to the bureau, is the new spray arrangement that can be installed in addition to the regular spray head. This is a series of spray heads set at right angles to the sides of the cabinet directing the water toward the center so as to flood the body with water from all sides. By simply turning on an auxiliary valve after thoroughly soaping the body, a quick wash-off is secured with the body spray.

From early childhood to old age the habit of the daily bath is encouraged by the convenience of a shower. The modern shower cabinet in the present age is considered one of the necessities, says the bureau, and not a luxury of modern living.

Leaky Roofing Can Be Fixed With Asphalt

A roof that leaks all over can be given a coating of heavy asphalt and asbestos compound, which will fill up cracks and nail holes and preserve the roof for several years. However, before this coating is applied all curled and broken shingles should be replaced or repaired.

If the leak is centered, it can be located by looking at the underside during a rainstorm. It is very likely to be at the junction of two surfaces—a valley or the joint between a chimney and the roof, or where a dormer is cut through. In this case, the fault is probably in the flashing, but if it is in the middle of a large roof area, it is likely to be from a curled or loosened shingle.

Floor Cleaning Made Easier

Kitchen floors that are covered with linoleum sometimes cause the housewife considerable unnecessary work because of the difficulty in cleaning the surface where it joins with the base of the wall.

A simple modernization project that will put an end to such bother is the installation of a curved base. To apply a cove base, as it is called, a cove stick is nailed to the base of the wall and both wall base and stick are covered with linoleum paste. The covering is then fitted to the base and stick.

'Package Mortgage' Aids Young Couples

By C. H. Ellingson

(President First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington)

THERE have been more far-reaching changes in the method of acquiring and financing a home during the past 10 to 20 years than perhaps in the 100 preceding years.

It is a far cry from the days when a couple starting life could not hope to acquire a home without a substantial down payment—a first mortgage calling for large monthly payments with the entire principal coming due in a few years—plus a second mortgage bearing a back-breaking rate of interest.

Today we have "direct-reduction" monthly payment home loans which include taxes, insurance, etc., with monthly payments; FHA insured mortgages and VA guaranteed home loans. Back of our home-lending have the credt facilities of the Federal Home Loan Bank system.

ELLINGSON

As a result it is possible today to acquire a home with only a nominal down payment and under most liberal financing terms—terms extending from 20 to 25 years—at rates of interest which are the lowest in history and provide for ONE monthly "rent-size" payment that includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance.

In addition, there is another innovation in the home finance field. The so-called "package mortgage" is a comparatively new device in home financing which enables the borrower to include the cost of new household equipment, such as refrigerators, deep-freezers, laundry equipment, gas and electric ranges, etc., as a part and parcel of the first mortgage, which represents the primary financing of his home.

The advantages of such a financing plan are obvious: (1) It enables the borrower to deal with only one lender; (2) payments are made smaller by being distributed over a longer period; (3) payments are uniform throughout the life of the loan instead of being heavy during the first years, usually the most vulnerable to the home buyers; (4) the interest rate is lower than is usually paid on installment financing for household equipment, and (5) household budgeting is simplified with only one monthly payment.

The "package mortgage" brings to the fore questions of policy and law. With respect to policy, there is the possibility that the equipment will wear out too quickly and that the borrower may deliberately remove the equipment. In jurisdictions where this type of lending has been tested, it is contended that both fears have proved to be groundless.

In processing such a loan, careful attention must be given to proper appraisal of value, description and identification of the equipment, fire insurance coverage, and, most important assurance that title to the equipment is vested in the borrower free from incumbrances.

Questions of law, it seems, will require a redefinition as to what constitutes "real property" and personal property." This question seems to have been overcome in many jurisdictions by the so-called "intention theory" whereby the mortgage and mortgagee agree in writing as to what attachments shall be considered as part of the realty.

The "package mortgage" will impose many new responsibilities upon home-lending institutions. The real test as to whether this new financing plan is here to stay will depend largely on the feasibility of lending institutions being able to do this type of lending with a reasonable degree of safety. As to the advantages of the "package mortgage" to home buyers, especially the young couple just making a start in life, there can be no question.

G. I. Groups Divided on Housing Plan

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

ON the question of T-E-W, the veterans organizations are in a s-t-e-w.

Which is to say they're on both ends and in the middle of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing legislation.

The American Legion (claimed membership: 3,300,000) is agin' it, chiefly on the grounds that the T-E-W bill smacks of socialism and is not specifically a veterans' bill.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars (claimed membership: 2,000,000) is for it, but lukewarmly so.

The American Veterans Committee (claimed membership: 100,000) is very definitely and passionately for it, and has made it a major plank of its domestic program.

The Amvets—American Veterans of World War II (claimed membership: 100,000) is neither for nor against it, but on a piecemeal basis favors government stimulation of rental housing.

Legion Has Own Program

THE Legion, led by a World War II housing committee, plugged for abandonment of housing controls on the theory that freedom from restrictions would stimulate the nation's builders to put up more houses.

The Legion's youthful housing committee came up with its own veterans' housing program last year, but it proved too complicated and cumbersome.

At the Legion's most recent convention, held in New York last month, sentiment for the T-E-W bill increased substantially. The Legion's housing committee meet this month to discuss a new program of its own.

Last year the VFW convention delgates overrode a committee report and came up, surprisingly, in support of the legislation. But the VFW stand received no enthusiasic backing from the old-line leaders, and Louis Starr, national commander-in-chief, was openly opposed to the organization's position.

This year the VFW delegates reaffirmed their stand, and VFW can be expected to put up a more active stand on behalf of the controversial legislation.

AVC Fights for Bill

THE AVC has been and still is virtually lock, stock, and barrel for W-E-T and T-E-W. Aside from any benefits that might come from the program, designed according to its sponsors, to produce a large number of low-cost, low-rent housing through private and public construction—the AVC considers the T-E-W bill desirable social legislation.

A small organization, AVC has within its membership a disproportionately large number of crusade-spirited, social-minded individuals, who are articulate and loud far beyond their numbers.

AVC fought hard and long for the Wagner-Taft-Ellender bill, and will continue the fight for the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

Amvets sidestepped the T-E-W bill chiefly because the delegates attending the convention last year didn't understand it. This year's convention will go into the question, and prehaps come up with an answer.

New Lampholder Shows 'High' and 'Low'

Bridgeport, Conn.—Lampholders which indicate at a glance whether the lamp is on "high" or "low" have been announced by General Electric.

Eliminating the necessity for turning the bulb on and off with the common small rotating switch, and counting "clicks" to be sure of a desired intensity, it is claimed the new "Trigger Ring" lampholders provide for selection of "hi" when the switch is in an up position, "lo" while in a down position and "off" when in the center of the switch handle.

Pupils' Safest Conveyances

The National Safety Council says that children riding to school on streetcars, trackless trolleys and buses are seven times safer than if they were driven to their studies in a private motor car.

Fireproof Paper, Yes, But No Fireproof Ink

Lovers of old documents have dreamed of an indestructible paper on which valuable records could be traced and thus preserved for posterity. This idea found expression many years ago in the manufacture of a paper made from asbestos fibers.

Although the asbestos paper withstood the fire test admirably, scientists report, the ink used in the writings burned away leaving the sheets blank. No way yet has been found to make asbestos ink.

Doubled-Up Families Reach New D. C. Peak

The number of Washington families living doubled up reached a new high this year, according to a recent Department of Commerce survey on population trends here. About 40,000 local married couples are living a "two-family-in-one-household" existence.

Getting along with in-laws is a requisite for peaceful living for about twice as many local residents as before the war. There are now 25,700 more local couples without their own households than in 1940.

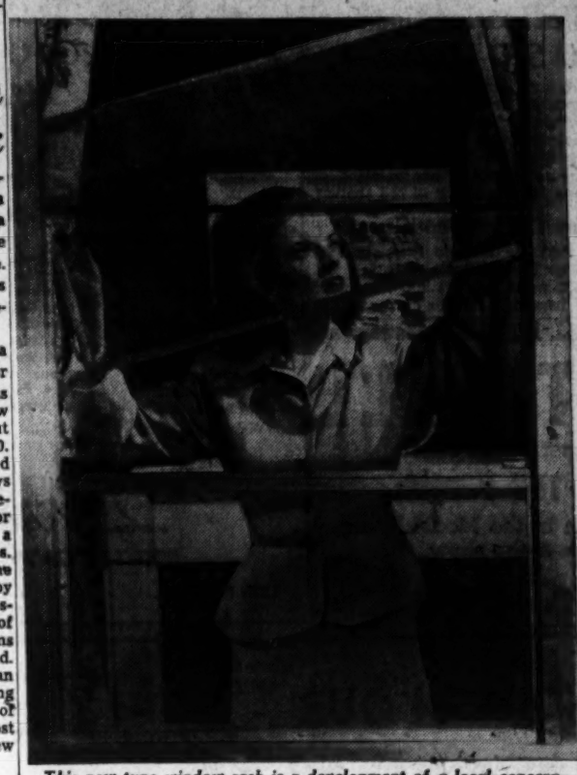
Postwar doubling up has affected some home-building trends, says the Tile Council of America. Foremost among these is demand for an extra tiled bathroom and a streamlined kitchen in new homes.

A recent study of postwar home buyers' and renters' demands by Herman O. Walther, former president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, confirms this trend, the Tile Council said. The study disclosed that more than one tiled bathroom and a long narrow kitchen with plenty of cabinet space are among the most sought-after features in new homes.

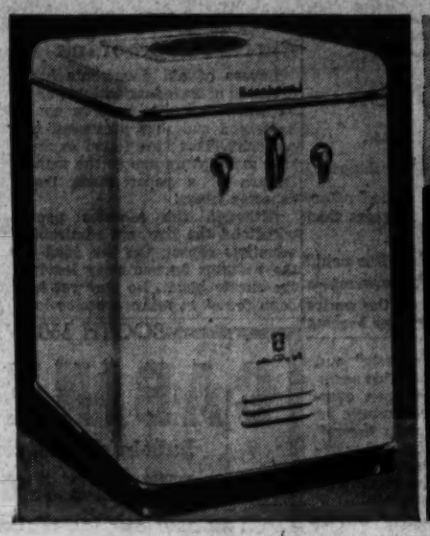
Washington Timber

About one-sixth of the total standing saw timber in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, is in Washington state.

Exhibit Items Add Glamour and Comfort to Home



This new type window sash is a development of a local concern, Hines-Frederick Corp., and will be on exhibit at the Home show



ONE of many automatic dishwashers on exhibit at the show, this model loads dirty clothes from top. Device washes, rinses and damp-dries. Clothes can be added any time during the washing or rinsing cycle—without water overflowing, the maker claims

AMONG items expected to draw much attention from visitors are the television sets which will be given prominent display by several exhibitors. This model boasts a large-screen picture, 15x20 inches, clearly visible in daylight or in a lighted room

THIS home has window awnings and a porch canopy of aluminum, vented for air circulation. The fixtures are permanent and will not rust, the manufacturer states. The item will be on display at the Home Show Exposition which opens this afternoon

Told In Series of Nine Panels

Exhibit Shows Step-by-Step Operations of Architects

AMONG the scores of interesting exhibits at the home show, which opens this afternoon, will be one prepared by the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, which is expected to clear the fog surrounding the operations of the architect.

The exhibit will show, step by step, how an architect designs a home.

The story is told in a series of nine panels, with photographs and drawings illustrating the different steps. First comes the site selection, then the programming of the requirements, including the number and sizes of rooms, plus special requirements, such as a hobby room, special closets and storage space, heating, kitchen arrangements and other items.

The architect then draws preliminary sketches. The client goes over these with him and suggests any changes. Next comes working drawings. At the same time specifications are written to tell the contractor the quality and types of material to be used.

Contractors are then asked for bids, the bids are analyzed and the contract let, the architect giving advice and guidance.

Finally construction is begun and the architect inspects the job regularly to see that drawings and specifications are followed and to correct any special problems which arise.

He also helps select colors and finishes, lighting fixtures and other items. Then comes the great day—the house is finished.

Fitting Screens

Window screens should be fitted before they are painted. If this is not done often when the paint plumes away through raising and lowering there will be sufficient space between the bottom of the scren and the sill to allow moisture to enter.

But Don't Let Junior Play With Rocks

People Living in Glass Houses Have More Light, Beauty

MODERN home builders are becoming more conscious of the practicality of glass and glass-like plastics throughout their dwellings, says Practical Builder magazine. Small rooms with few windows gain spaciousness in appearance through the use of a glass wall, mirrored walls or doors. Corrugated sheets of heavy, clear plastic are flexible, easy to handle in making inner partitions, screens, shields for indirect channel lighting.

Glass blocks in interesting patterns form either inner or outer walls, with or without clear set-in windows, semi-partitions between living and dining areas or kitchen and dinette. Built-in tables and cabinets utilize glass tops and shelving, the magazine stated.

New thin sheet glass (about 1/4 inches thick) is available in a variety of designs: louvred, lined, fluted, checked, for use in room partitions to add light and a feeling of space; to screen off parts of multiple function rooms; to obscure undesirable outside views; as transoms or decorative illuminated wall panels, the article adds.

Plate glass windows and doors have added beauty to many homes, giving them living walls of glass that bring nature indoors without discomfort, add light and color.

Glass shower doors and tub enclosures do away with bothersome curtains, and colorful structural glass has proved its utility in bathroom and kitchen for its easy cleaning, lasting attractiveness.

As permanent decoration in the home, etched or sand-blasted designs on tinted glass panels have fluorescent back lighting to give a soft, diffused touch to the room. There's beauty in glass—utility and flexibility. It's easy to install, simple to keep clean and shining and does not corrode or discolor.

FHA—13-Year Success Story

man stated, "The main point of emphasis for 1947 is rental housing. It is of major importance that a maximum number of rental units be provided.

They should not be compelled to buy in order to get shelter. To increase the proportion of rental units, we intend to use all available means — new construction, conversion, and rehabilitation. The great bulk of this task will fall upon private enterprise."

To aid in accomplishing these objectives, FHA is utilizing every facility to encourage construction of rental housing for veterans.

The program is designed to produce rental units at relatively low rentals. Project types include eight-family or larger apartments financed under Section 608 of Title VI, National Housing Act; two, three and four-family dwellings financed under Section 603, and additional dwelling units provided thruogh conversions and rehabilitations of existing structures under Title I.

Interest has proved so great that it was necessary for Congress to increase Title VI insurance authorization to four billion dollars, with the additional proviso that the President could increase it to $4,200,000,000.

It is expected that 1947 will be the largest volume year in FHA's history. During the first seven months a record volume of applications for mortgage insurance involving about 321,000 dwelling units was received.

Approximately 230,000 new construction units were covered by this total, over one-third designed for rental.

This volume equalled that received during the largest twelve month period heretofore. It appears reasonable to estimate that during 1947 FHA will have received applications for mortgage insurance covering 500,000 dwelling units, including both new and existing structures.

800,000 Units Predicted

I BELIEVE the total number of new residential units completed this year by private enterprise, will approximate 800,000. If this is correct, nearly as many units will be constructed this year as were completed in the peak year of the building industry.

Despite high construction costs new residential units started have increased each month, reaching a new high in August of 83,000 units. Privately financed dwelling units completed also reached a new high in August, totaling 70,300, 78 per cent above July 1946.

Reports indicate a trend toward greater building activity in suburban areas and small towns. Prior to and during 1945 about 36 per cent of the new residential construction was outside cities, but in 1946 this ratio advanced to 40 per cent, and in 1947 is expected to reach 45 per cent.

There does not appear to be any significant change in regard to the availability of mortgage money; however, there is an increase in the proportion of loans carrying less than the maximum interest rate provided by FHA regulations.

One point should be made entirely clear. FHA does not and will not place the emphasis on volume. Volume is merely the reflection of need and the extent to which this Administration can be of service. We do not expect to participate in the majority of mortgage transactions. However, we feel it advisable to have sufficient volume to exercise an influence in the mortgage and real estate markets.

The total FHA insuring operations since its establishment in 1934 have exceeded 10 billion dollars of mortgages and property improvement loans, reserves of more than 137 million dollars have been built up, and dividends of $4,500,000 paid to borrowers who have paid off their homes. At the same time, FHA is self-supporting. Its income in 1946 exceeded 24 million dollars after operating expenses.

New Era Ahead

WE are now at the threshold of a new era. Today there is a much greater need complicated by the problems of economic transition from war to peace.

FHA is prepared to assist in meeting that need to the fullest extent of its ability. I pledge all possible help to the lending and building industries and to the consumers of housing.

Peacetime expansion of FHA services has extended its usefulness. That wider usefulness is designed not for one group of the American public but for all who are interested in housing—its financing, its production, and its consumption either through rent or purchase.

FHA is ready to render, veterans and the public in general, service through its insurance operations, in such varying fields as (1) modernization and rehabilitation of existing housing; (2) new homes particularly in the lower cost range; (3) rental housing accommodations; (4) minority group housing; (5) refinancing existing home mortgages; (6) country homes; (7) industrialized and prefabricated housing; (8) cooperative housing, and (9) purchase from the Government of permanent public housing.

On the basis of my 13 years of experience in housing working with private industry I am confident that the task of properly providing adequate housing for most American families will be accomplished.

Home Building Trend Reveals Strong Back-to-Farm Movement

CITY FOLK frantically hunting for homes might well cast a covetous eye at their country cousins, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

In and around big cities, home builders have slowed up because costs are too high. But in rural areas and small towns, there's a different story. New home building is making headway.

The reason: Lower costs for land and labor. In many rural or suburban areas "beyond the water mains" an acre or two can be purchased for the price of a city lot.

Lower original land cost, and consequent lower carrying charges on the investment, and lower taxes, often as much as 60 to 75 per cent lower, more than offset the extra cost of the well, the water system and the septic tank.

These are some of the factors that account for the home building boom in many suburban and rural areas. One out of three homes constructed under the veteran's program has no connection with a public sewer.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, an estimated 33,582 new dwelling units were started in urban areas during the first three months of 1947. That's 28,322 less than in the corresponding period last year. On the other hand, the Labor Bureau reports 54,018 starts on rural nonfarm housing units in 1947's first quarter, 5322 more than in January-March last year.

The development of various home utilities, particularly the automatic electric water system, has made it possible for dwellers beyond the city limits to have that most sought-after of all conveniences, running water under pressure.

The cost of operating an electric pumping system is low, often as little as 50 cents a month. In fact, in many cases there is no additional cost inasmuch as the electric water system makes the homeowner eligible for the minimum kilowatt rate.

Heart of the water system is the electric pump which may be of the shallow well or deep well type, depending upon whether the depth of the well exceeds 25 feet.

Electric water systems are now available in package units consisting of the pump, the motor, pressure tank, automatic switch, relief valve and air volume control.

A new development in water systems is the jet pump, adaptable for either a shallow or a deep well.

In selecting a water system, the depth of the well, the distance the water will have to be pumped, and the water requirements of the household must be taken into consideration. It is always advisable to buy a pump which has a capacity somewhat in excess of immediate requirements. A strong, sturdy pump made by a nationally known manufacturer should be given preference.

For efficiency, economy and trouble-free operation, correct installation under the supervision of an experienced water system dealer is important. Not only will a dealer know which type of pump is required, but he will know how to install the entire system, including the sewage disposal system, so that the health of the occupants will be protected. It is vital to the peace of mind of the owner to have all pumping work done by an expert. Furthermore, an established and reliable dealer keeps a stock of repair parts and will provide service at all times.

Attic Cedar Closet Holds Winter Clothes

A cedar closet in the attic will provide storage space for winter clothing and keep bedroom closets, which are in daily use, free from crowding. No paint, varnish or other finish should be used on the cedar, and the door to the closet should be kept closed, preferably weatherstripped.

Metal Bases Give Rounded Corners

Rounded strips of metal may be inserted at the corners of the baseboard to prevent the gathering of dust. For the new home, there are wood insets to fit tight to each corner, giving the base strip a rounded joint. Either the metal or wood strips may be painted to match the woodwork.

Bonds to Be Sold at Home Show

The D. C. Savings Bonds Division exhibit will sell bonds on the spot at the Annual Home Show Exposition. The central theme will feature the close relation between investment in savings bonds and a home purchase.

The exhibit will include miniature models of homes designed by B. G. Holtzhauer of the Office of the Registrar of the Treasury. Treasury Department representatives answer questions concerning savings bonds and make sales. Visitors will be presented leaflets describing Series E, F and G bonds. The payroll savings and bond-a-month plans will be explained.

Illusion of Warmth, Light

Washable Plastic Wallpapers Have Textured Wood Appearance

By Eugenia Sheppard

NEW wallpaper is keyed to interior architecture and works with it to correct a room's faults or to develop its good looks. It helps with the illusions of warmth, light, higher or lower ceilings. Sometimes it doubles as an actual architectural feature like a column, a railing or a dado and only a curious finger can find out whether it's wood on the wall or only paper cleverly printed to have a three dimensional look.

Occasionally wall coverings that look like wood or paper turn out to be neither. They are plastics, a small group still in their babyhood, but much liked and used by top decorators of contemporary settings. Their sculptured texture makes an interesting contrast to the smooth, simple silhouettes and light colors of the new furniture.

In this first plastic group, look for Woodgrain, that is all pinched-up ridges. A more delicate version, Woodgrain, jr., suggests fine wale corduroy and both lend themselves to color as easily as plain walls. A third plastic by the same makers gives you the cool freshness of straw matting.

Being so new, the plastics are none of them budget priced. They can be scrubbed with water, though, and their life expectancy is almost human.

Papers Are Washable

ON THE subject of washability, papers have hurried to catch up with plastics. Almost all of the new ones are ready to make claims about their practical natures.

One little collection is actually washable—25,000 turns with a brush and warm, soapy water are said to be its try-out record. Synthetic resins are worked into the basic consistency of this paper, though you'd never guess to look at it, and there is no telltale gloss. The patterns are colorful and smart.

Other new papers are described as possible to sponge off, though a mild going-over with a regular wallpaper cleaner is advised first. You can give any paper a reasonable degree of washability at home, according to one distributor of the highest style and most exciting designs. His only advice is to experiment with a sample piece to make sure colors don't bleed through and the background doesn't turn yellow.

Among other miracles wartime laboratory experiments have brought to wallpapers is special treatment with DDT. The chemical, blended into papers for nurseries, makes things unpleasant for the insect world, but brings no harm to hands or even to the paws of pets. Walt Disney has styled the designs with some of his comic characters and there are plain colors to harmonize.

Papers that create texture or a three-dimensional look for walls are definitely newest. Colors are clear and bright, though there are plenty of dark ones, down to coal black. Whether the turn to deep-toned backgrounds is the reaction to years of dye shortages or just natural dramatics, your guess is as good as mine.

If you are decorating this year, you can buy daisy-printed black for one wall, contrasting it with three plain black sides—an effective program for a foyer. As for prescribing definite papers for definite rooms, the only laws are laid down by architecture, furniture and the owners' general mood.

Appearances Deceiving

TEXTURED papers, usually slanted towards contemporary rooms to give them depth and softness, tell a fascinating story this season. Marble papers are developed in new shades and with a freer drawing technique. Others look like grainy wood, shining satin ribbon, damask, a Spanish lace shawl or an old hook rug from a Pennsylvania farmhouse.

Some textured papers I like specially are translated direct from the hand-woven fabrics of Dorothy Liebes. Many of them even reproduce her characteristic gold thread running through the pattern.

Also by Mrs. Liebes is a cool rattan paper. She used to look down from her studio windows at the roofs of San Francisco's Chinatown, and drew it from what she saw there. Liebes papers are all sold at moderate price, a nice climax to their story.

Scenic papers are almost as old as the history of wallpaper itself and some of the rarest, most colorful are still in existence, if you have a collector's pocketbook. Modern scenic papers are also to be had, hand-tinted like the early ones, or for more limited incomes, turned out by lithography. The lithographed papers look soft and hazy and, probably for that reason, do a good job of space-creating where space isn't.

Blueprints in Reverse

NOT only lithography but the blueprint process has been taken over by wallpapers, too. A wartime discovery called ozlid makes it possible to give you the blueprint in reverse in blue on white.

Even most of the documentary papers look new this year. Their designs, taken from swatches left in old mansions, have ben restyled and freshened for color.

Don't stop at walls for using any or all of these newcomers in wallpapers. Ceilings are naturals to show them off, and so are floors and furniture, if you give them protective coats of shellac.

Copyright, 1947, New York Tribune, Inc.

Shellac Derives From Sanskrit

Shellac, known to the average home owner as a coating for floors and other wooden surfaces, derives its name from the ancient Sanskrit word "lac," which means "one hundred thousand," suggestive of the multitude of tiny insects which exude the highly useful gum from which shellac is made, and collected from the branches of those trees in India, Burma and Siam, upon which they swarm.

District Hardware To Show Oil Burner

A fully automatic oil burner of the vaporizing type, with electric ignition and no moving parts, will be shown in booth No. 135 at the Home Show, sponsored by the District Hardware, Radio & Appliance Co., Inc.

The burner is designed to heat small homes and, its backers state, operates on 2 to 3 quarts of oil per hour. This is compared to the one gallon per hour fuel consumption of the average burner, the firm added.

Designed for Future Expansion

A COMPACT house plan dictated by postwar building costs, but designed for future expansion. E. L. Baker of 1525 W. High st., Lima, Ohio, was the architect. This is his design 701. The house comprises 22,000 cubic feet. A usual fault in small houses, direct entry from street to living room, is avoided by planning the entry to one side and providing for access to a future second floor from that point. The architect points out that the living and dining rooms can be separated by accordion type folding doors, partition or left open for spaciousness. Attic is large enough for two more bedrooms

120,000 Visitors Took A Look

Exhibit Home Must Be a Success—325 People Wanted to Buy It

The Washington Post
This model home, on exhibition for the past four weeks, has attracted over 120,000 visitors

By Phil Hevenor
Post Reporter

THE local organized home builders figure they've taken an accurate count of the prospective home owner's pulse.

Among the 120,000 visitors who have visited the unique "Industry-Engineered" model home on 14th street have been 325 prospective buyers who have offered cash for the house, which cost an estimated $13,000 to erect.

In addition, the builders boast, only one out of 500 visitors have left the home with no favorable comment. What better evidence to show the home is a hit with the public, the builders reason.

Another 20,000 people have bought tickets at the booth in the model home garage to see the builders' Annual Home Show Exposition at the National Guard Armory, 19th and East Capitol sts. se., which opens this afternoon at two o'clock.

Mrs. Isabelle Ritter and her sister, Miss Nettie Austin, of 5006 13th st. nw., both homekeepers for 20 years, were interested in the labor-saving gadgets, yes, but the "Cabinet-Wall" closets in the master-bedroom and children's room, plus scores of kitchen cabinets, drew their strongest praise.

"I like the home's compact, step-saving features," Mrs. Ritter remarked, "especially the open window between the kitchen and dining-living room."

"And," he sister chimed in, "the cross-ventilation in all rooms; and the soft and smoothly toned colors which the decorators used."

Kitchen Wins Raves

AN unidentified man was particularly conspicuous as he went from room to room pounding the walls, floors, bathroom, tile and kitchen shelves.

"It's ideal for a young, married couple," he acidly commented.

Visitors seemed most impressed with the kitchen, where every bit of space has been fully utilized by a washing machine, automatic garbage disposal system in the sink, dishwasher, ice-crusher and indirect lighting from ceiling-flush globes over the sink, stove and sideboard.

The home is the first in the United States to be erected by the "industry-engineered' system, so called because all segments of the housing industry, from building-material producers to carpenters, cooperate to produce housing items which fit into a certain floor-plan without on-site cutting or adjusting, saving time and expense.

Designed by Jan Pierre Trouchaud, architect, the house was built by George Martin, with the aid and supervision of Clarke Daniel of the Home Builders Association.

Larry Hanson, executive director of the association, estimated that one person in 500 leaves the home with no favorable comments to make.

Criticism may range from the obviously low ceilings of a small house to the hamper space apparently lacking in the bathroom. Others say the front door is too close to the kitchen door.

The clapboard-siding house is designed for easy movement. Actually, it is three separate structures rigidly joined together.

Still Good as New

THE initial traffic of over 100,000 visitors has produced no visible signs of stress or strain on the floors, walls or ceilings. Joints appear to be as firmly mounted and bolted as when originally constructed.

The 2-bedroom bungalow will remain open free to the public from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., until October 19. It will be given away free, completely furnished, on the closing day of the home show, to the person who writes a winning fourth line to a three-line jingle. The house will be moved, free of charge, to any properly zoned site within 10 miles of the present location.

One young bride commented: "We'll win the jingle contest and have the builders move it next door to mamma."

"Next to mamma?" the groom asked. "What a horrible thought!"

Handy Fluorescent Lamps

Plug-in flourescent lamps have been developed for special lighting assignments in the kitchen, bathroom, playroom or laundry.

Glass-Making Advance

Cove Lighting System Aids Illumination

Cove lighting derives its name from the curved molding near the ceiling line in which the lamps are concealed. It reflects light toward the ceiling, which results in an even illumination when properly designed.

In modernization of a household lighting system, cove lighting may be substituted for the old type of central lighting fixture.

Live Termites Eat Exhibit Here

By JAMES K. CHANDLER
Real Estate Editor

Mortgage bankers in convention at Hotel Statler are startled to see in the skeleton model house, shown here in the smaller picture, real, live termites eating away at the rafters, joists and beams.

W. B. Hill of Memphis, who knows termites intimately but is not friendly with them, set up his part of the convention exhibit to show mortgage lenders how termites can eat away their equity.

Termites, he says, can foreclose on a house before a mortgage lender can get an answer to a letter from his home office. (See large photo).

The Hill termite control system requires building slotted pipes into all inaccessible areas around the foundation, such as beneath dirt-filled porch, stoop and step.

Once a year the Hill System man comes around, shoves a poison gas hose into the slots, turns on a heavy gas which sinks into termite tunnels, but won't rise up to bother the mortgagor's family.

This, Hill explains, doesn't kill all termites. But it so confuses the termite colony, which always nests under houses (not in the rafters), that it can never get organized and finally dwindles into a confused death.

Lawn Repair Is Done Best In October

American golfers have spent $1,000,000 for lawn research since 1921. More than half of this was spent at the big experimental grass farm maintained cooperatively by the United States Gold Association and the United States Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Md. Here are some of their discoveries, reported in Better Homes and Gardens Magazine, which you can put to use in your lawn this fall:

Keep moss out of your lawn by feeding the grass and trees regularly. Feed trees by means of foot-deep holes punched every 2 feet in a circle at he drip line of the longest branches. Place about a pound of mixed plant food in each hole. If moss returns, just chase it away again with plant food.

Cut off lower branches of your trees to let in sunlight. Good lawns can be grown under trees only when the grass receives enough light. Don't water shaded grass too much or you will attract tree roots to the surface. Spade, fertilize, and seed shaded bare spots in October—not in the spring. Use red fescue for shady dry spots, rough-stalked bluegrass plus 10 per cent bent grass for shady wet places. Kentucky bluegrass seldom thrives in heavy shade.

Soil fertility and how short you mow your lawn determine which grasses will thrive. Kentucky bluegrass makes a trouble-free home lawn when the soil is rich and the mower is set at 1½ inches. Bentgrass needs a rich soil, much attention to disease control, generous feeding and watering, and close cutting (½ to ¾ inch). Fescue, a wear-resistant grass, thrives on dry, sandy soils, and must be cut no closer than 1½ inches.

Roll your lawn only if needed. One light rolling in the spring is plenty—and unless your soil heaves during the winter, no rolling at all is better. Use rollers only to push down soil heaved up by moles or by frost, not to smooth a bumpy lawn.

Tray Storage Problem Solved

Trays and platters offer an awkward storing problem. This can be solved by means of a divided compartment in a kitchen cupboard. This holds the trays upright and it is possib oelstteehe it is possible to see the size of the various plates before removing them.

House Owner Lives in Backyard Tent

Peabody, Mass. (U.P.).—When Alexander Guzowski bought a three-family house in Peabody for his family and his in-laws, he didn't expect to be tenting in the backyard.

But the families already living in the house obtained extensions on their eviction notices. Guzowski, meanwhile, was forced to move from the house he'd been occupying.

So he and 12 relatives, including five children, put up an army tent on his newly acquired property and set up housekeeping.

Rabbit, Groundhog Double Up on Home

Charleston, W. Va. (U.P.).—Not only do humans double up to meet a housing shortage, but wildlife apparently does, too, according to Everett V. Price, State game protector.

During a heavy snow, he found a den in a briar patch with both rabbit and groundhog tracks leading into it. When he passed the same spot later in the day, he saw a groundhog sitting on one end of a nearby log and a rabbit on the other.

Both darted into the den when they spotted him.

Autumn Is Best Time to Plant Evergreens

By Alfred Puts

EARLY autumn is by far the best time to transplant the cone-bearing coniferous evergreens. Although they never are completely dormant, the growing process slows down appreciably soon after the summer is over. As is the case with most other plants, that is the best time for transplanting.

Preparation of the soil may then be arranged to suit the gardener's convenience much more readily than in the spring, when one has to be on the alert to pick the few days the ground is in a workable condition. Yet the work must not be delayed too long, otherwise winter will catch the plants before they have developed plenty of strong new feeding roots, which are very important to their welfare. This process of root formation goes on not only during the warm fall days but also during balmy winter spells.

BECAUSE evergreens are more expensive than deciduous shrubs it pays to take extra care in planting them. The hole should be large and deep. Unless the soil is rich in organic matter and food elements to a considerable depth, allow for filling in with good soil around and below the root ball. This layer should be at least 6 inches thick. Compost soil is ideal for this purpose, but a mixture of good garden soil, humus or peat moss and sand, where the topsoil is rather heavy, will serve well.

For good measure a little complete plant food may be incorporated with this mixture. Beware of an excess, as it may spell the doom of the plants. A quarter-pound for each foot of plant diameter is plenty for spreading types. Upright growers may receive a quarter pound of the trunk, measured at the ground line.

Fill in the bottom of the planting hole and tamp down so that the plant will not settle soon after it is set out. A stick placed across the hole, level with the surface, is needed for planting at the correct depth, which is at or a little below the previous ground line.

Insist on having the plants delivered with the roots balled and burlapped so that the original soil will remain in intimate contact with the roots. If it falls away, the chances of the plants surviving are slim.

SPECIAL SOIL TAMPED DOWN FIRMLY
LOOSEN SUBSOIL
KEEP ROOTS MOIST UNTIL THE SOIL FREEZES FOR THE WINTER
PROTECT PLANTS WITH A BURLAP SCREEN DURING THE FIRST WINTER

Planting Procedure

FOR that reason the burlap is not removed before planting. After the soil has been tamped down around the periphery of the ball but before the depression is filled completely the burlap is cut away from around the trunk and the upper part of the ball. Some gardeners just roll it back and cover it with soil, which will hasten its rotting.

To insure thorough watering after planting there may be left a depression of an inch or two to hold the water. Fill it several times until satisfied that the root ball and the filled-in soil are well saturated. Filling the depression with moist peat moss will facilitate further watering, which is needed at least once a week while the weather remains warm and dry.

Continue watering until the soil surface freezes for the winter, then apply a good mulch of peat moss, straw, salt hay or leaves several inches beyond the original planting hole.

Even the hardiest kinds should have some protection the first winter after moving. Drying winds and warm rays of the winter sun may spoil all the care previously given. Some kind of screen is needed for protection. This may be burlap fastened to stakes or long straw or corn stalks fastened to wire stretched between deeply set posts. None of such material must touch any of the branches which would cause injury by rubbing against the growth.

For Economy

Insulation Saves 69.4% Of Heat Loss

ECONOMY-MINDED home owners can cut house-heating costs this winter, according to a special bulletin recently issued by the Chamberlin Co. of America.

Theoretically, the bulletin states, a home perfectly sealed against heat losses would require that the furnace operate only long enough to raise inside temperatures to 70 degrees. Then, the furnace could be shut off and the temperature would remain at 70 degrees throughout the winter. This is a wonderful dream for the man who pays the fuel bill.

As no home is perfectly sealed against heat losses, furnaces must operate constantly through cold weather to maintain health and comfort.

One method of reducing fuel bills and increasing comfort is by increased heating plant efficiency. This is effected by installation of thermostats, stokers for coal furnaces and other devices designed to furnish more heat from the fuel used.

The second method is by sealing off structural heat losses. Structural heat losses occur in these ways and percentages:

Through ceilings and roofs, 16 per cent.

Through walls, 27 per cent.

Through window glass, 26 per cent.

Through door and window cracks, 26 per cent.

Opening of doors and miscellaneous, 5 per cent.

The bulletin explains how these structural heat losses can be substantially reduced. When quality materials and expert installation methods are used, it states, heat losses may be cut by the following percentages:

Rock wool 4 inches thick will stop 80 per cent of heat loss through ceilings and roof.

Rock wool 3½ inches thick will stop 70 per cent of heat loss through walls.

Storm windows will stop 50 to 60 per cent of heat loss through glass.

Metal weather strip and calking will stop 85 per cent of heat loss through window and door cracks.

By all-around insulation, harried home owners can save a total of 69.4 per cent of winter heat.

The Chamberlain Co. emphasizes that these fuel savings figures are for the "average" home.

Home Builder Needs Service Of Architect

With the widespread use of ready-made house plans, the family which is going to build its own home all too frequently decides that the services of an architect are not required. But such decisions can often lead to grief, high costs and an unsatisfactory house, says the Construction Research Bureau.

Architectural services are a small fraction of the total cost of a home, the standard fee ranging from 5 to 8 per cent of the contract price, and a competent architect can and usually does save his client the amount of his fee.

He prepares plans and specifications, receives bids and supervises construction. In taking bids, the architect knows whether prices are out of line, and in supervising construction he sees to it there is no slipshod workmanship nor substitution of materials.

From the star to finish, the architect acts as a professional adviser to the owner in drawing contracts, certifying building charges, complying with building codes and lien laws. In other words, he sees that the owner gets what he pays for and relieves the owner of a great deal of responsibility.

An example of how an architect can save money is in the heating system. This usually is about 10 per cent of the cost of the house. Figures in the hands of most architects show that proper thermal insulation permits the installation of a smaller heating unit and less radiation.

$36 Per Month Was Too Much Rent

VA Is Out $15,850 as Five Vets Mar Record of 9726 Home Loans

THE situation didn't make sense. The veteran drew pay of $90 per week, and yet he had stopped monthly payments of $59 on the home he had purchased under the GI bill. The VA investigated.

The results of their investigation are filed in a cabinet, marked "pending further action." The case is one of 119 received by the local loan guarantee office of the Veterans' Administration.

In this particular case the VA discovered the veteran was a heavy drinker, his wife had left him and was planning a divorce, and the situation was not one to encourage home ownership.

The record of local veterans who have purchased homes using their GI bill loan guarantee privileges is good. Out of 9726 claims approved, with a dollar value of $84,179,114, only 5 claims have marred the record.

However, 119 cmoplaints from lending institutions have been received. Of these, 75 have been "cured" and 29 are pending further action. Breaking the situation down even further, 15 complaints have resulted in claims. Of these, 6 were withdrawn before settlement, 5 were paid by VA and 4 are pending.

Pay or Move Out

"CURED," according to C. F. Glover of the loan guarantee office, means that complaints were withdrawn for one reason or the other. Ususally the veteran pays up his mortgage payments or sells the house.

One veteran paid $300 to bring his payments up to date when he learned his mortgage would be foreclosed the next day and his home was put up for sale.

Other cases aren't settled as easily. Glover told of a case in Chapel Oaks, Md., the veteran and his family abandoned the property and no one has seen them since. The house was subjected to vandalism and most of the fixtures had been demolished or stolen by the time VA took over.

VA paid off the lending institution, fixed up the house and resold it. They're still looking for the original owners, however.

Three claims were paid by VA on homes in one Arlington County subdivision. One veteran figured he had a fool-proof way of accumulating greenbacks. He never moved into his new home; he rented it out, pocketed the rent money and overlooked his mortgage payments to the bank. That didn't last long.

Out of the 9726 loans processed, VA has paid claims amounting to only $15,850 so far. However, complaints are coming in more frequently, and the amount will probably soar.

Thankless Tasks

WHEN the VA thinks the veteran has tried his best to meet payments, but hasn't been able to do so, because of unforeseen developments, it will bail him out by taking over the mortgage. In such cases, payments are made directly to VA.

In one such case, Glover stated, the VA has received neither thanks nor any payments. The veteran had been hurt in an auto accident and was out of work. With eight mouths to feed at today's prices, the outlook was gloomy.

The VA took over the mortgage, saved the house from foreclosure, and hoped the veteran could work out some form of payment. As of yesterday, the veteran wouldn't even come into Glover's office to discuss the case and has made no payments.

In another case, a veteran whose payments amounted to only $36 per month decided he'd pay no more. He was subsequently dispossessed and the VA took the loss. "Where in Washington could a family rent a good house for $36 a month?" Glover asked. "This man didn't use his head."

There have been few cases of former servicemen "overbuying." If a man wants to buy a $15,000 house on $200 per month take-home pay, he is discouraged at the beginning by the VA and the lending institution.

Not so lucky are the veterans who make a down payment on a property they like and sign a sales agreement that does not contain a clause voiding the transaction if VA disapproves the loan.

"After they think it over and realize they've made a mistake, they want their down payment back," declared Glover. "But there's nothing we can do about it."

He recommended that veterans who plan to use their GI Bill loan guarantee privileges to purchase a home make sure the following agreement is included in any sales contract:

"It is further strictly understood and agreed that the terms of this contract are contingent upon approval by the Veterans' Administration of a loan in the approximate amount of $———— under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 as amended by Public Law 268, otherwise this contract becomes null and void and the vendee's deposit shall be returned in full."

Hot Tempers, Wet Cellars

MORGAN Callahan, loan guarantee office for the District area, declared some veterans had "little pride of ownership" in their newly purchased homes.

Discussing complaints from veterans who had bought homes and later griped about deficiencies, Callahan said many deficiencies would not have resulted if the owners had displayed a little initiative in correcting them.

He stated that a small category of veterans reasoned that a purchase of a home under the GI Bill was "cheaper than renting. Some treat their homes as a rented house and think a builder should fix each item that goes wrong in a year's time."

The majority of complaints, he added, concerned wet basements. He told of one veteran who asked the builder to correct a damp basement. It was discovered that a garden hose had been left running for three days.

The vast majority of legitimate complaints, Callahan explained, have been taken care of by reputable builders. It is only the fly-by-night operators who have been slow in correcting deficiencies.

Questions and Answers

Q. My kitchen lighting is not satisfactory and I am going to install additional outlets. Where should they be placed to give the best results?

A. A light over the sink, one near the stove, and a center light should prove adequate. The work should be done by a competent electrician.

Q. To what depth should the concrete footing of a chimney be carried?

A. Footings should be carried down below the frost line prevailing in the neighborhood. They should be designed to adequately support the load to be carried.

Q. I want to paint the concrete wall in my basement. What type of paint would be best to use?

A. You should consult a paint dealer, as he can assist you best in selecting the paint that suits your needs.

Q. Can I have a property appraised by the FHA without making an application for an insured loan?

A. No.

Q. In selecting a home site, would it be better to choose one on a main thoroughfare or a side street?

A. Usually a side street is preferable, as there is less noise, danger, and more privacy.

Q. Can a cellar be kept dry by putting drain tile around the foundation walls?

A. If there is a sewer or other place into which the tile line may be drained, it will help. The walls, of course, must be reasonably tight.

Faulty Backfill Often Cause Of Wet Cellar

Damp basements, a frequently encountered flaw in construction, are often due to improper back filling.

When a foundation is dug and later refilled, rubbish is sometimes used in the fill. Water running down the walls of the house collects in pools and seeps through pores or cracks in the walls and into the basement. The remedy is to refill the trench with clean carefully packed dirt.
